EDITORIAL BRIEFS.

If an untruth is only a day old it is called a lie; if it is a year old it is called a falsehood; but if it is a century old it is called a legend.—New York Herald.

The cotton crop of the United States for the year ending September 1 is estimated at 5,757,397 bales, the largest probably ever raised, and worth $200,000,000.

San Francisco people have a prejudice against cooking oysters, because they say that cooking makes them indigestible. But they go right along cooking cabbages, sausages, mince pies and mining reports.

A Memphis man wanted to kill a mosquito on the back of a friend's neck, and without stopping to mention his design, hit the insect a belt, and when his friend got up and brushed the sand out of his mouth and eyes, four men had to hold him while the matter was explained.

Remarkable as is and has been the commercial progress of the city of Chicago, it is somewhat singular that the present census makes its population sixty-three thousand less than that of the city of Brooklyn, which is only an outlying suburb of New York. The completion of the Brooklyn bridge will give that city an immense impetus.

It is rather laughable to read that some of the largest depositors in the Ladies' Bank at Boston were business firms eager to take the chance of obtaining eight per cent. interest on their running balances. By way of explanation, it is said that many of these depositors knew the thing was a swindle, but took the chances of profit, as the deposits from the country were always sufficient to allow a margin to pay the current demands of city depositors.

It does not appear to be the most covetable position in the world that of a German editor. In fact, outside of England the old world editor is somewhat in the position of a toad under a harrow—the probabilities are that the forks may miss him, and the probabilities are that they may hurt him. The latest victim is the editor of the Borsen Courier, who, because he ventured to intimate that Prince Bismarck has a special line of policy, must pay five hundred marks or take fifty days' imprisonment. It is very fortunate, we may suggest in this connection, that the editor of Truth does not happen to have his office in Berlin.

The Irish Land Leaguers want us help them in their contest with the British government, and they seem to have an idea that they have only to ask our assistance to receive it. They make a great mistake. Americans have much sympathy for the Irish people, as they have abundantly proved, but they cannot countenance, much less abet, insurrection against lawfully constituted authority. It is true that when we had a rebellion on our hands some years ago, Great Britain sided strongly with the rebels, but the American people have too much respect for law and too high a sense of international honor to follow such an example. Neither, indeed, have they any desire to interfere in a family quarrel.

The credulity of the European statesmen who have charge of the Turkish business apparently knows no bounds. Week after week the Sultan has kept the allied fleet dancing attendance in the Ragusa Roads by promises as freely renewed as they are freely broken. According to the last story, Dulcigno was to have been surrendered on Monday. If those concerned only knew how ridiculous they look to outsiders, they would either give the word to advance or acknowledge that the Turks have been too much for them, and recede from a position which is extremely humiliating. The naval demonstration, which was to frighten the Sultan into making any desired concessions, has proved to be a perfect farce.

Lake City, Florida—Indications favor election of Bloxom, Dem, for Governor, Dawson to Congress in 1st and Miles in 4th dist. Dems claim Philips in 2d district.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Nov. 2.—The total vote of Chattanooga is 2,625, the largest vote by 400 ever polled here. The Republicans claim the election of their entire ticket by 500 maj. There was a heavy vote all over the state. The Republicans carry Chattanooga by an increased maj over 1876. The chairman of the Republican State Committee at Nashville telegraphs the Democrats concede the election of Hawkins, Rep for Gov and a Rep gain of three Congressmen. The legislature is probably Rep. The returns show large Rep gains.

New York, Nov. 2.—Telegrams from Indiana state that the returns from every county so for heard from show large Rep gains over the October vote.

Bennington, Vt., Nov. 2—The indications are that Garfield's maj will be larger than the Governor's in September. Ninety-two towns give Garfield 25,522, Hancock 10,253, Weaver 827. Rep gain of 975.

Augusta, Maine, Nov. 2, 8 p. m.—Senator Blaine has just sent the following dispatch:

To General J. A. Garfield, Mentor, Ohio.—Maine has given you a handsome maj over all opposing tickets. Will send details later.

J. G. Blaine.

A dispatch from Augusta Rep headquarters says the state is for Garfield sure by 4,500 maj.

The Kenebec Journal says: The state has gone Rep by four thousand to five thousand and perhaps by a larger maj, as all the towns heard from generally give large gains over the September vote.

Richmond, Va., November 2.—Goode, Dem, is elected to congress. Dezindor, Rep, in the Second district, is elected, a Rep gain of one. Fifty-two precints in the state give the regular Dem ticket 9,394, Readjusters 1,958, Rep 6,010. Returns from two-thirds of the city give the regular Dem ticket 4,887, Readjusters 362, Rep 2 168.

Hartford, Ct, Nov 2, 9:15 p m.—There is no doubt but that Connecticut has gone for Garfield by from two to three thousand maj. The Democrats give it up at this hour. Miles is elected to Congress in the Fourth district. The Democrats claim Phelps in the Second. Buck, Rep, is elected to Congress in the First district by 1000 maj. Waite, Rep, is elected in the Third district. Ninety-three towns give Garfield 31,365, Hancock 28,391. This includes all the cities but Hartford.

FOR GARFIELD, - - 231

A Magnificent Victory.

At the hour of going to press election returns are not received on which to state exact results, but all the indications show that a sweeping Republican victory has been gained, and that the North presents a solid front against the rectionary influences of the South and the party of free trade and forged documents in the North. First in importance as well as in the signal character of the victory gained, is the result in the Empire State. The splendid fight in New York has been crowned with a most glorious success. The Democratic majority in New York city has been reduced to 40,000 and the most cautious estimates place the Republican majority in that State at not less than 30,000. Even the mayoralty of the Tammany stronghold hangs in doubt, and the Tammany chiefs have conceded the State. New York, Connecticut and New Jersey wheel into line and cast their electoral vote for Garfield. The gains reported from Maine make that State safe for Garfield at 5,000 to 10,000 majority. The only other close State, Indiana, is not behind and has already reported gains enough to swell her plurality for the Republican electoral to 10,000. The solidly Republican States have rolled in immense majorities. The present tenor of the returns warrants the claim of a solid North, but we refrain from asserting that claim until its absolute correctness is verified by the latest returns.

With this sweeping vote, the control of the National House of Representatives is of course transferred to the Republicans. At this hour we have advices of the gain of one Congressman in Massachusetts, one in New York, one in Virginia, one in Missouri, one in Tennessee and two in Pennsylvania, making enough to give the Republicans control of the House of Representatives. The result also assures the Republicans a gain of three Senators in New York, Connecticut and New Jersey, making five Senators gained so far this year a possible gain of two more. This is and a glorious vindication of Republican candidates and a crushing condemnation of the slanderers and forgers who have made the Democratic campaign one of the most discreditable in our political history. Hurrah for Garfield, our next President, and for the never dying principles of the Republican party.

Taking up Passengers from Way Stations.

On some railroads, like the Pennsylvania, time is saved to express trains by providing long tanks between the tracks, from which the moving locomotive scoops up its needed supply of water without stopping. It has occurred to a German inventor, says the Ledger, that something similar is needed for taking up passengers from way stations without delaying the train by a stoppage. The passengers would not like to be scooped up like the water supply or hooked off a standard like the mail bags, so the ingenious inventor has provided for them a waiting carriage, provided with a motor like a "dummy," and having a wire cable wound on a drum. When the express train comes along a hook on the last car catches a ring, in which the cable terminates, and the waiting car is carried forward, not with a sudden jerk, but at a rate gradually increasing to that of the train, the cable being unwound in the process. Then the motor is used to rewind the cable on the drum, until close connection is made between the waiting car and the train, when the passengers are transferred and the waiting car is cut loose, to be carried back to its station by its own motive power.

There seems to be one business that is not booming these good times. We allude to the coffee trade which has been very much depressed for a year past. There has just occurred a heavy failure of a house which enjoyed the highest reputation, and still enjoys the esteem and sympathy of the business community, the House of Bisley & Co., New York, who have failed for over a million dollars. There are also other failures in this trade, but this is the largest. Pity they could not have held on a little longer until Republican success could have carried them through.

San Francisco, Nov. 1.—Wilhelm Fritsch killed his wife yesterday by cutting her throat, after a desperate resistance. He then stabbed himself a dozen times in the breast and stomach, inflicting probably fatal wounds.

Poetry.

Autumn.

Into the fields flew a little bird;
In the joyous sunshine his song was heard;
And wondrous sweet was the sound of his lay
"Farewell, I am going!" it seemed to say—
"Far, far away
Must I travel to-day."

That sweet field-music I lent an ear;
It made me sorry and glad to hear;
With an aching joy, with a gladsome pain,
My heart rose lightly, then sank again,
"Say heart, say heart,
Art thou breaking for pleasure or breaking for pain?"

The leaves around me fell sadly down,
Then I said, "Alas! the autumn is nigh!
The summer swallow has homeward flown.
Perchance, thus love and longing fly—
Far, far and swif,
With time they drift."

But the sunshine streamed around me anew;
Back to me quckly the little bird flew,
And sang, as he saw my falling tears—
"Love knows no winter in his years.
Nay, nay!
For love there is no such thing;
It is, and must be always, spring!"

—Ludwig Tieck.

Our Story Teller.

TRYING TIMES.

'Broiled spring chicken for tea, eh?' said I. 'And lobster salad and fried oysters! Upon my word this looks as if we were going to have company.'

'So we are, my dear,' said my wife, seeming guilty, as she polished up the surface of the silver tea tray with a new chamois leather. 'They are all coming to visit me—Uncle Silas, Aunt Melicent and the children, and Cousin Joab, and the two Miss Wilmerdings, and my Aunt Louisa, to meet the Rev. Mr. Speakwell, from Minnesota, who married my second cousin, Jerusha Wilde. Mr. Speakwell is troubled with catarrh, and he thinks of staying at our house for a few weeks while he is being treated by Mr. Dosem.'

I put down my linen duster and brown paper parcels with some emphasis.

'Oh, confound the Rev. Mr. Speakwell!' said I.

'John!' ejaculated my wife.

'Well, my dear, I can't hold it,' said I. 'It's not in human nature to endure everything. And I have been relationed out of all patience ever since our marriage. The Jenkinses went away last week, the Birdsails took an affectionate leave yesterday, and now, just as I was contemplating a peaceful evening by ourselves, here's a new swarm just about to settle down upon us. In my opinion, Kitty, relations should be abolished.'

'I am surprised at you, John,' said my wife. 'My own people are so fond of me.'

'There's where you are mistaken, my dear. It's your comfortable spring beds and good cookery they are fond of, not you.'

'John!'

'I'd be willing to wager a good round sum on the truth of my assertion,' said I.

'Because you have no relations yourself—'

'Thank Providence for that!' said I. 'I was reared in a foundling asylum, and have nobody to thank but myself for my tolerable success in this world.'

'It's no reason why you should find fault with mine. And Mr. Speakwell is such a spiritually-minded man, and dear Uncle Silas loves you just as if you were his only son, and Cousin Joab is so interested in our children.'

'I'm much obliged to them,' said I dryly. 'But I slept all last week on soft cushions lying in the bath tub; and we had fourteen people here over the anniversaries; and I was obliged to give up my own room for a month last winter to old Mr. Manswell, not to mention our being half poisoned with Aunt Louisia's hygeian messes in the fall. When the poet said, "There's no place like home," I presume he meant when there were no relations visiting. I'll tell you what, my dear, I've got a great mind to deed over this house to your relations, if they will agree to leave me in peace for the rest of my life, wheresoever I may set up my family tents.'

'Nonsense!' said my wife. 'Do go up stairs and change your things, and brush your hair and get ready for tea. They're all waiting in the best parlor, and I was awaiting your return to see about hiring some cot beds from the village hotel, to put up in the attic for those four little Speakwell children. You see, Aunt Louisa has the blue bedroom, and Cousin Joab sleeps in the little wing chamber, and Mr. and Mrs. Speakwell will have our room, and—'

'Indeed! And we are to sleep in the barn, I suppose.'

'Don't be cross, John,' said my wife, appealingly. 'One must be hospitable; and I can easily arrange the sofa bed in the back parlor for our use, for a week or so.'

I said nothing, but ground my teeth in silent despair, as I sprang up stairs, two steps at a time, to make what changes I could in my toilet by the aid of a ten by twelve glass hung over the washstand of a stuffy little bath room.

The Rev. Mr. Speakwell was a big man, with a still bigger voice, and a limp, faded little wife, whose sole earthly interest seemed to centre in her four white-eyed, freckled-faced children. Uncle Silas and Aunt Melicent were a silent couple with excellent appetites, and two tall boys, who giggled and snickered at each other in the intervals of the conversation.

Cousin Joab talked incessantly with his mouth full, and the two Miss Wilmerdings served as general echoes to the rest; while Aunt Louisa devoured lobster salad ad libitum, and kept on sending up her cup for some green tea until I trembled for her nerves.

While my wife, careful and troubled, like Martha of old, with many things, looked ready to drop with the hospitable exertions she had made, and I sitting a mere cipher at the head of the table, felt as if I was keeping a boarding-house without any of the pecuniary emoluments therefrom.

'My trunks will be up in the 5 o'cock train,' said the Rev. Mr. Speakwell; 'I'll trouble you, Cousin Poyntz, to send an expressman to the depot for 'em. And if there's any department in this domicile, Cousin Poyntz, that could be fitted up as a study for my temporary use, it would greatly facilitate my intelletual occupation to my sojourn in the suburbs of this great city. And still during the hours which I devote to study.'

Here my wife looked at me aghast, thinking of little Johnny and the baby.

'Never mind, my dear,' I remarked sotto voce, 'we can easily get 'em boarded out somewhere.'

'And,' went on the Rev. M. Speakwell, 'I should esteem it a favor if a horse and buggy could be procured for my daily use when going to Dr. Dosem, in the city, as the motion of the train disagrees with my nervous system.'

'I don't happen to own a carriage, but I might buy one,' said I.

'Thank you, thank you, Cousin Poyntz,' said Mr. Speakwell blandly. 'And if there's any other little thing you should happen to want, pray dont't be backward in mentioning it,' I added.

'No I won't,' Cousin Poyntz,' said the reverened gentleman, with the utmost gravity.

And I am bound to say that he kept his word.

For three days I endured the swarm of visitors which literally infested my home, and then I made up my mind that patience had ceased to be a virtue.

'I'll put a stop to this thing,' said I.

I came home one night with a tragical expression on my face.

'Katharine,' I said to my wife, 'I am ruined.'

'What!' cried all the company at once.

'Those shares in the Western Union, you know,' said I, smiting my forehead.'

'Yes, dear,' gasped poor Kitty.

'They have gone down, said I. 'Not worth a penny.'

'Oh, John.'

'I wish I had taken your advice, and let 'em alone,' said I. "But, after all, it doesn't so much matter, as if I had no friends.'

I looked beamingly around at my wife's relations. They returned the glance by the blandest of stares.

'If I borrow $200 a piece from all these dear kindred,' said I, with obtrusive cheerfulness, 'and request Uncle Silas to indorse my business notes—'

'I couldn't think of such a thing,' hurriedly interrupted that gentleman.

'I should be most happy to oblige, but I am quite out of funds at present,' said Cousin Joab.

'And I,' said the Rev. Mr. Speakwell, pushing back his chair, 'must save what little share I possess of the world's filthy lucre to pay my passage and that of my family back to Minnesota.'

'Surely,' cried I, 'you would not go away and leave me in such pecuniary straits as these.'

The Rev. Mr. Spekwell significantly buttoned up his pockets.

'It is every man's business to look after himself, Cousin Poyntz,' said he; 'and I don't scruple to say that it is downright dishonesty for a business man like yourself to get into such financia' difficulties.'

And in fifteen minutes every cousin in the lot had, upon one excuse or another, vanished from the room, to pack and prepare for immediate departure.

I looked at my wife; my wife looked at me. I burst out laughing; Kitty began to cry.

'My dear,' said I, 'it's an easier job than I thought it would be. I didn't know but that it would be necessary for me to catch the small-pox before I could get rid of your relations.'

'But we are very poor, John? And must give up this dear little cottage? Oh, how cruel it is of Uncle Joab, and Mr. Speakwell, and Uncle Silas, and all of them, not to help you! I know Mariana Wilmerding has $5,000 that she wants to put out on interest, for she told me only yesterday, and—'

'Yes, exactly,' said I. 'But probably she doesn't regard me as a good investment.'

'After all I have done for them!' sobbed my wife.

'Relations are only human, my dear,' said I.

The company took their leave without much ceremony or adieu, and that afternoon my wife came to me, with tears in her eyes.

'John,' said she, 'will you tell me how much money you have lost in that horrid Western Union stock? Because I would rather know the worst at once.'

'Lost?' repeated I, looking up from the newspaper, which I was reading in Uncle Silas' favorite easy chair, now vacated for the first time in many days. 'Why, who said I had lost anything?'

'You did.'

'Excuse me, my dear; I said nothing of the kind. I merely stated that the Western Union shares were not worth a penny. Neither were they, to me, as I had sold out all I had possessed a week ago."

'John?'

'Yes, my dear.'

'How could you?'

'Very easily,' said I, with a latent smile. 'My dear, I think if your relatives had stayed another week I should have committed suicide.'

'And you told that horrid story just to get rid of them?

'I made that unimpeachable statement with that precise intention.'

'They were rather trying,' confessed Kitty. 'And I think they might have helped you a little when they thought you were bankrupt.'

'They will not come visiting here again,' said I, quietly.

And I was right. They did not.

He Obtained a Situation.

An amusing story is told by one of the most prominent railroad officers of the Western States. Said the manager:

A few years ago I took hold of the —— railroad in Texas, which at that time was in bad condition. For several months I was very busy trying to bring order out of chaos, and all my time had to be devoted to the affairs of the road. During certain hours I had given orders I was to be disturbed under no circumstances, and my clerk had instructions to admit no one. One day during these hours the following incident occurred: I was busy at my desk when the door burst open, and a long, lank, uncouth, cadaverous looking Texan stood before me. His homespun pants were in his boot tops, his rough face seemed as though it had never seen a razor, and his long, uncombed hair streamed out from under a large sombrero down on his broad, wiry shoulders. He marched straight up to my desk, and without taking off his hat said in a gruff tone:

'Is Smith in?'

I looked up in amazement and replied: 'Yes, sir, that's my name.'

'Well, then, cast your eye on that,' said he, slapping a letter down before me.

I picked it up and read it, and found it to be a letter of introduction, saying the bearer was a trustworthy man who wanted work, and asking that it be given him.

As I finished the letter he again broke out, 'Well, Smith, what d'ye say? Can you give me a posish?'

I waited a moment and then said: 'You appear to be quite a forward young man, and you want a position. Now, sir, don't you think you would have stood a better chance of getting a position if you were more polite in your manner? If you had knocked at the door, and on being invited to enter, had come in quietly, taken off your hat and asked if Mr. Smith was in, and had offered this letter, asking with a polite bow, 'Will you have the kindness to look over this letter?' If you had done so, young man, don't you think your proposition would have been more favorably received than your present action?'

The young man looked at me a second, and then turned and left. A moment after I heard a rap at the door. I said 'Come in.' Again the same young man entered. Stepping softly he came to the desk, made a most elaborate bow, and said: 'Have I the honor of addressing Mr. Smith, the manager of the —— and —— railroad?' I bowed and said, 'Yes, sir.'

He again bowed and handed me the letter, asking me if I had leisure to look over it.

I took it, and again read it, and then looked up, saying, 'This is a very complimentary letter, Mr. ——. What can I do for you.'

Quick as a flash came the response: 'You can go to thunder.'

He turned and left with a laugh.

I saw there was something in the man. I followed him, called him back and gave him a position. He did his work well, and has since been promoted, until he now occupies one of the most responsible and best paying positions in my employ.

A Missing Will.

On August 17, 1876, Cynthia Hesdra, a colored lady, died in New York, leaving an estate valued at $80,000, which she bequeathed to her husband, Edwin H. Hestra. After she died no will could be found, and the relatives of the decedent claimed that she had made all the money in the laundry business, while the husband claimed that he had made the greater part of it in the cabinet-making business. He claimed that he deeded the property to his wife with the understanding that she was to make a will in his favor. He could not find the will, however, and made a proposition to his wife's relatives that if they would give him $6,000 he would resign his claim on the estate. They refused, and shortly after a will in his favor was found among some old papers, and it was entered for probate. It was witnessed by Peter Stephens, a justice of the peace in Nyack, and by Isaac W. Canfield, since deceased, a well-known citizen of that place. The decedent's relatives contested the will on the ground that it was a forgery, they claiming that Stephens signed all the signatures. The contest was tried before Surrogate Calvin, who rendered a decision admitting the will to probate.

Silesian Churches.

The churches of Breslau are of prodigious size and all wonderful for their exterior ugliness and interior splendor. Built of brick, now blackened by weather and smoke, it was probably intended to give them a facing of stone, for on no other ground can their ungainly roughness be accounted for. This was the case with many Italian churches, some of which, like Santa Croce at Florence, remained unclothed, as it were, till the last few years, while others like those in Breslau never found any generation pious enough to cover their hideous nakedness. In the Breslau churches roofs of gaily-tinted tiles give a touch of color, and old mortuary monuments have been imbedded in the outer walls so that they are incrusted with a series of gloomy sculptures which add a somber variety at least. Of course, in the olden time all the churches were Catholic, but at the Reformation many of them fell into the hands of the Protestants, retaining their old names, so that among the "Evangelical" churches, as they are called here, are those dedicated to St. Barbara, St. Christopher, St. Catharine, St. Elizabeth, St. Mary Magdalen, St. Salvator, and the Eleven Thousand Virgins. The Roman Catholic churches are named after saints, save one, known only as the "Sand Church," because it was built on alluvial, sandy soil on a fork of the river Oder.

The next morning after the news was received that Indiana had given a Republican majority, a rooster belonging to a certain Saco Democratic editor jumped upon the fence as the aforesaid editor was going to his daily labor, and crowed lustily. Railroad Inspection.

The annual fall tour of inspection of the Pennsylvania railroad and branches commenced Wednesday on the main line at Pittsburgh. Perhaps a brief description of the tactics employed in the inspection will be of interest to our readers.

The observation trains consist of an engine drawing a hotel and dining room car and pushing a "gondola"—that is, one of those hump-backed cars—a low, open platform car—with seats raised in tiers, the general officers and the division superintendents occupying the first train, the civil engineers the second, the road supervisors the third, and the division foreman the fourth. Each gentleman is provided with a printed form, on which he marks on a scale of from one (very bad) to ten (perfect) his estimate of each section of the roadbed. The verdict is reached by considering the condition of the track line and the ballasting, ditching, draining, policing and neatnes of the work. When the trip is completed these cards are made up and an average struck for each section. The highest average indicates to whom of the supervisors shall be given the first prize, usually a chronometer gold watch and chain appropriately inscribed, and to whom of the division foremen the second prize shall be given. There is great competition for these prizes and the system begun ten years ago has been found to be of the greatest value in getting the best kind of work done on the roadbed and line of rail.

A Model Temperance Lecture.

Judge Johnson, of one of the Western States, in passing sentence on a murderer, made use of the following strong language, which makes an admirable temperance lecture, and which we commend to our readers:

Nor shall the place be forgotten in which occurred this shedding of blood. It was in one of the thousand ante-chambers of hell, which mar, like plague spots, the fair face of our State. You need not be told that I mean a tippling shop, the meeting place of Satan's minions, and the foul cesspool, which, by spontaneous generation, breeds and nurtures all that is loathesome and disgusting, in profanity, in babbling, in vulgarity, in Sabbath breaking. I would not be the owner of a groggery for the price of the globe converted into precious ore. For the pitiful sum of a dime he furnished the poison which made the deceased a fool, and this trembling culprit a demon. How paltry the price of two human lives! This traffic is tolerated by law, and therefore the vendor has committed an offense not cognizable by earthly tribunals. But in the sight of God he who deliberately furnishes the intoxicating draft which inflames men to anger and bloodshed is particeps criminis in the turpitude of the deed. Is it not high time that the sinks of vice and crime should be rigidly accountable in the law of the land and placed under the ban of an enlightened and virtuous public opinion.

Saturday Night's Frolics.

The police were kept unusually busy Saturday night in preserving order on the streets. Several pugilistic encounters took place and drunks were numerous. Between eight and nine o'clock what seems to have been a free-to-all scrimmage was inaugurated at the Bush House, in which, from all accounts, beer glasses and clubs took a prominent part. Nobody was killed, but two or three of the belligerents came out of the contest badly used up, one in particular who exhibited a pair of eyes that reminded one of a doorbell hung with crape. One man named Killen was arrested and locked up, and one or two others only escaped arrest by making themselves scarce.

Married on Her Deathbed.

The Altoona Sun says: A sad scene took place at Canton, Ohio, Monday night, when Miss Ada Tonner and Mr. George Reynolds were united in marriage at the side of the bed on which the bride lay dying. The marriage was set for Christmas, but the lady is dying with consumption of the bowels. Mr. Reynolds is a banker of Leadville, Colorado. Miss Tonner has many relatives and friends in Bellefonte who will be pained at the reception of this melancholy intelligence.

—Some of our Democratic friends in the Legion, who paraded in Millheim on Wednesday, seem to have been "hard hit" by some of the young ladies representing States in the procession. We heard several of them yesterday expressing their admiration thusly: "Tennessee's the gal for me," "Wasn't that blonde Ohio immense," "But did you notice that black-eyed Indiana," etc. We think we'll have to tell somebody's wife, eh, Bill?

—The Johnstown Tribune says the record for six weeks past shows a greater number of deaths from diphtheria, in proportion to population, than there were in Memphis during tee worst period of yellow fever two years ago.

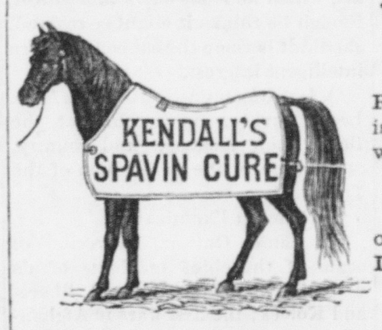
Kendall's Spavin Cure.



It Cures Spavins, Splints, Curbs Ringbones, and all similar Blemishes, and Removes the Bunch without Blistering.

For Man it is now known to be one of the best, if not the best, Liniments ever discovered.

We feel positive that every man can have perfect success in every case if he will only use good common sense in applying KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE, and persevere in bad cases of long standing. Read below the experience of others.

From Col. L. T. Foster.

Youngstown, Ohio, May 10th, 1880.
DR. B. J. KENDALL & CO.: GENTS: I had a very valuable Hambletonian colt which I prized very highly; he had a large bone spavin on one joint and a smaller one on the other, which made him very lame. I had him under the charge of two veterinary surgeons, which failed to cure him. I was one day reading the advertisement of Kendall's Spavin Cure in the Chicago Express; I determined at once to try it, and got our druggists here to send for it. They ordered three bottles. I took them all and thought I would give it a thorough trial. I used it according to the directions and by the fourth day the colt ceased to be lame, and the lumps had entirely disappeared. I used but one bottle, and the colt's limbs are as free from lumps and as smooth as any horse in the state. He is entirely cured. The cure was so remarkable that I let two of my neighbors have the remaining two bottles, who are now using it.
Very respectfully, L. T. FOSTER.

From Rev. P. N. Granger,

Presiding Elder of the St. Albans District.

St. Albans, Vt., Jan. 20th, 1880.
DR. B. J. KENDALL & CO.: GENTS. In reply to your letter I will say that my experience with Kendall's Spavin Cure has been very satisfactory indeed. Three or four years ago I procured a bottle of your agent, and with it, cured a horse of Lameness caused by spavin. Last season my horse became very lame and I turned him out for a few weeks, when he became better, but when I put him on the road he grew worse, when I discovered that a ringbone was forming. I procured a bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure and with less than a bottle cured him so that he is not lame, neither can the bunch be found.
Respectfully yours, P. N. GRANGER.

PERSEVERANCE WILL TELL.

Stoughton, Mass., March 10th, 1880.
B. J. KENDALL & CO.: GENTS: In justice to you and myself, I think I ought to let you know that I have removed two bone spavins with Kendall's Spavin cure, one very large one: Don't know now long the spavin had been there. I have owned the horse eight months. It took me four months to take the large one off, and two months for the small one. I have used ten bottles. The horse is entirely well, not at all stiff, and no bunch to be seen or felt. This is a wonderful medicine. It is a new thing here, but if it does for all what it has done for me its sale will be very great.
Respy yours, CHAS. E. PARKER.

STATEMENT MADE UNDER OATH.

To Whom it may Concern: In 1875 I treated with Kendall's Spavin Cure a bone spavin of several months' growth, nearly half as large as a hen's egg, and completely stopped the lameness and removed the enlargement. I have worked the horse ever since very hard, and he has never been lame, nor could I ever see any difference in the size of the hock joints since I treated them with Kendall's Spavin Cure. R. A. GAINES.
Enosburg Falls, Vt., Feb. 25th, 1879.
Sworn and subscribed to before me this 25th day of Feb., A. D. 1879.

Justice of the Peace.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

ON HUMAN FLESH it has been ascertained by repeated trials to be the very best Liniment ever used for any deep-seated pain of long standing, or of short duration. Also for CORNS, BUNIONS, FROST-BITES or any bruise, cut or lameness. Some are afraid to use it on human flesh simply because it is a horse medicine, but you should remember that what is good for BEAST is good for MAN, and we know from experience that KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE can be used on a child one year old with perfect safety. Its effects are wonderful on human flesh and it does not blister or make a sore. Try it and be convinced.

What is Good for Beast is Good for Man
Read of its effects on human flesh:
Patten's Mills, Wash. co., N.Y., Feb. 21, 1878.
B. J. KENDALL, M. D.: Dear Sir: The particular case on which I used your Kendall's Spavin Cure was a malignant ankle sprain of sixteen months' standing. I had tried many things, but in vain. Your Kendall's Spavin Cure put the foot to the ground again, and, for the first time since hurt, in a natural position. For a family liniment it excels anything we ever used. Yours truly,
Rev. M. P. BELL,
Pastor M. E. Church, Patten's Mills, N.Y.
Bakersfield, Vt., Dec. 23, 1879.
B. J. KENDALL & CO.: GENTS: I wish to add my testimony in favor of your invaluable liniment, Kendall's Spavin Cure. In the spring of 1872 I slipped on the ice and sprained my right limb at the knee joint. I was very lame and at times suffered the most excruciating pain. I wore a bandage on it for over a year, and tried most everything in my reach, but could find nothing that would give me permanent relief. When I overworked, it would pain me very much. In April, 1878, I began to think I should be a cripple for life, but having some of Kendall's Spavin Cure thought I would try it. I used one-third of a bottle and experienced relief at once. The pain left me and has not troubled me since. I feel very grateful to you and would recommend Kendall's Spavin Cure to all who suffer with sprains or rheumatism.
Yours truly, MRS. J. BOUTELL.

Send address for Illustrated Circular, which we think gives positive proof of its virtues. No remedy has ever met with such unqualified success to our knowledge, for beast as well as man.
Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. All druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors.

MRS. LYDIA E. PINKHAM
OF LYNN, MASS.

DISCOVERER OF
LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND.
The Positive Cure
For all Female Complaints.
This preparation, as its name signifies, consists of Vegetable Properties that are harmless to the most delicate invalid. Upon one trial the merits of this Compound will be recognized, as relief is immediate; and when its use is continued, in ninety-nine cases in a hundred, a permanent cure is effected, as thousands will testify. On account of its proven merits, it is to-day recommended and prescribed by the best physicians in the country.
It will cure entirely the worst form of falling of the uterus, Leucorrhœa, Irregular and painful Menstruation, all Ovarian Troubles, Inflammation and Ulceration, Floodings, all Displacements and the consequent spinal weakness, and is especially adapted to the Change of Life. It will dissolve and expel tumors from the uterus in an early stage of development. The tendency to cancerous humors there is checked very speedily by its use.
In fact it has proved to be the greatest and best remedy that has ever been discovered. It permeates every portion of the system, and gives new life and vigor. It removes faintness, flatulency, destroys all craving for stimulants, and relieves weakness of the stomach.
It cures Bloating, Headaches, Nervous Prostration, General Debility, Sleeplessness, Depression and Indigestion. That feeling of bearing down, causing pain, weight and backache, is always permanently cured by its use. It will at all times, and under all circumstances, act in harmony with the law that governs the female system.
For Kidney Complaints of either sex this compound is unsurpassed.

Bernhardt in America.

The perils of the ocean have been passed, and Bernhardt is now safe in America, carefully located in New York in a suite of rooms in the Albemarle, where she can look out upon the beauties of Madison Square, wonder to whom was erected the Worth monument, reflect that she lives on the same street with the society and fashion of the new world, and see pass before her the busy throng of American sovereigns. She has only to walk a single block to see the scene of her possible triumphs in the finest theatre of New York, which bears the name of our greatest tragedian, and she has eleven days in which to prepare for her challenge to the fame of Rachel.

No foreign actress ever stepped upon American shores with the prestige, the fame and the fever of expectation which has greeted the deserter from the Francaise—the favorite of fortune, the one woman who, secure behind her shield of genuius, has defied society, the theatre and the government, and so far has issued from every conflict, bitter as it may have been, with the laurels of victory on her head. Rachel came here to conquer an unknown continent. Her name was known to a few, but she had her way to make for herself in the new world. Bernhardt comes to a public which reads at its breakfast table and discusses in the same breath the performance of the combination which they have seen the evening before and the furore created by Bernhardt three thousand miles away at the same time. Never has there been such a judicious catering to the curiosity of the public, such a careful feeding of the popular taste. In fact, the audience that will greet Sara Bernhardt on the Monday after the country has decided who is to be President for the next four years is likely to know too much, rather than too little, about the star whom they come to see.

The result rests with the artist herself. Public anticipation and curiosity have been aroused to the highest point. She has had everything possible done for her, not only on this side, but across the water. She has had the choice of her own company, not at her expense, but at the cost of the manager, who has graciously given her everything that she asked, and has engaged people fully competent to support her, and as far as we may judge, equal to the requirements of a perfect representation. In fact she has been placed in a position where she has everything to lose and little to gain. If she can only fulfill public expectation, show the people of America that she is the greatest actress that we hope, her triumph is assured, and the profit of her manager is made certain.

American Cheese Business.

From an article in Bradstreets, on the growth of the cheese industry in the United States, the following extracts are made:

The growing importance of the cheese industries in the United States is attracting much attention abroad, as well as in this country, and some facts concerning its increase may prove both useful and interesting to our readers. It is only within a comparatively few years that the factory system has been adopted which has resulted in the building up of innumerable factories in all the cheese centers of the United States, and in the production, by every art of manufacture which improved methods could bring about, of cheese of such uniformly good quality as to be in constantly increased demand by our foreign customers. In fact, ever since 1878 we have taken more pains to cater to the tastes of English customers, and consequently our cheese has been improved in flavor, as well as in firmness and keeping qualities. The result is that our exports of cheese to Liverpool alone during the present fiscal year, it is estimated, will be about 130,000,000 pounds, against 23,220,000 pounds in 1865-6. Since the first of May the English market has taken from New York every week from 25,000 to 120,000 boxes of cheese, all of which have been consumed at the ruling high prices. During the past five years the cheese production of the United States has fully doubled, of which 41 6 per cent. was exported last year, while only 3.9 per cent. of our butter was sent abroad. In July, 1879, the price of finest cheese in New York market was down to five cents per pound, while other grades ranged from three and a half to four cents. The consequence was that English manufacturers could not compete with us, and a large number were driven out of the business, being obliged to sell their cows, etc., to meet their obligations. Up to about four years ago the trade of New York depended upon the English cables for the ruling price, but since then the boards of trade throughout this country have become so thoroughly organized that the business now centers in New York city, which makes the price daily for the whole world.

The best cheese is made in June and September, the latter for winter stock. It may not be out of place in this connection to give the comparative number of milch cows in this country and the principal agricultural countries of Europe. These statistics are up to last December, and as late as any we know of:

In Germany, - -	8,961,221
In France, - -	5,513,765
In Great Britain & Ireland,	3,788,769
In Sweden, - - -	1,356,576
In United States, about,	13,000,000

The Excellence of Marriage.

Happy unions are always voluntary, not only at the beginning, but as long as life lasts. Love cannot be made free by a change of statutes. It cannot be bound or lost under any circumstances. If the State should listen to the petition of those who ask that sex relations be exempt from control, the experience of a quarter of a century would convince the world that the old, long-tried, monogamic solution of the sex question is the wise one. There are evident reasons why such a result would come. In all the past emotional experiences of the race, it has been found impossible to create an intense idealization of more than one subject at a time; and it has been found, too, that when such an idealization has been tested by knowledge and time it does not diminish, but deepens, and that the effect of this long-continued idealization is to create the best conditions of development, both for those who exercise it, and for those toward whom it is directed. Now, if the best conditions of happiness are once secured they should be maintained. It is not possible to bring out all the results of this mutual sex idealization in any short period of association. The very fact that the association is a permanent one gives it earnestness and dignity. It would not be possible to extract from a half-dozen associations, extending over a period of twenty-five years, the same amount of fine character-development that would come from one fortunate association lasting for the same time. When we are once sure of the wisdom, and integrity, and affection of some friend through long experience, we spend no more brain activity in learning his peculiarities of character and in adapting ourselves to them. The association of man and wife is rather moral and affectional than intellectual. It is a rest, a certainty, a point of departure for other activities. Once settled, and safely settled, we waste no power in readjusting the relations, but take the fruit as it ripens, without the need of uprooting the old and planting new trees.

Trade in Cat-Tails.

It may not be known that trade in cat-o'-nine tails, or cat tails, or catkins, or whatsoever they may be rightly called, is of some importance and magnitude. Whoever discovered and made known the fact that the proper place for the swamp-nurtured catkin was the parlor and drawing room has not left his name behind, but certain it is that in the year 1879, and more particularly in the year 1880, catkins began to be included in the house-furnishing of ornamental things. At the present time the demand is large and increasing, and a useless weed has become an article of commerce. The catkins are used with pampas grass, sea oats and native grasses to make up the contents of vases which ornament mantels and room corners. This has become the rage, as it is called, and many a room is undergoing the process of catkin and grass adornment. For the reception of these grasses large and small vases are used, according to location, and drain pipe ornamented by home handiwork are used for the same purpose as well as for umbrella stands. The catkins with the beautiful pampas grass add a great deal to the attractiveness of any room, and particularly of that one with complimentary surroundings. The time was when the beauties of natural grasses were concealed under a coating of alum, or some other glistening substance. From this tinsel we are gradually turning to a more correct taste, even in such small matter as catkins. One firm in Providence has laid in a stock of about three thousand catkins.

"A Blamed old Quaker."

He was a peaceable looking man, with a quiet-looking horse attached to an unattractive wagon. He wore a wide rimmed hat and a shad-bellied boat as he drove easily down the South Easton hill journeying from Bucks county to the land of Northampton, Pa. He was observed by a fellow of the species 'rough,' whom much loafing made impudent, and who lifted up his yawp:

'S-a-a-y! hat, where are you going with that man?'

'Verily, I journey beyond the river, friend!' mildly responded the Quaker, 'and thither goeth my hat also.'

'Hold up! and take a fellow along can't you?' called out the man of wrath.

'Nay, friend! my business and inclination forbid it.'

'I'll soon fix that;' and the fool ran forward and jumped on the steps.

'Verily, friend! if thee insist upon getting into my vehicle I will even help thee,' and the man of peace reached out a right hand as resistless as an oyster dredge. It caught the youth around the throat worse than a four year old diphtheria, jerked him into the wagon and slammed him down among the straw, where he got tramped upon by a pair of number thirteen cowhides until he thought he had got caught in a shower of spike drivers. Finally he got a kick that lifted him clear over the side of the wagon, had his head ran into the bank by the roadside, where he dwindled down in a heap like a gum shoe discouraged by street car, and murmured, as he rubbed his ensanguined nose:

'Who'n blazes'd a ever thought the castiron man'd gone around with steam up an' disguised as a blamed old Quaker?'

She Changed her Mind.

A big, good-natured doctor was desperately in love with, and had been twice refused by a fair haired little woman. But instead of the disappointment curing his love it only made the passion more intense. After the last refusal he told her that if ever she changed her mind to let him know, as his love for her was unchangeable, and he would be proud to be her husband. Some months later he was driven home from seeing a patient, when he saw his lady love riding in his direction. Supposing she would merely bow and pass on, as she had often done before, he did not pull up his horse. But the moment Miss Dixon came up to him she reined in her horse, stopped, and called out:

'Won't you stop, Mr. Hill?'

He raised his hat and replied:

'I shall be happy to do so,' then waiting for her to speak.

She was gazing at the ground and blushing deeply, but quickly looking up, she filled the Doctor's heart, by saying:

'Dr. Hill, I have been closely watching you lately, and seeing nothing but goodness and noble mindedness in your character, and believing you will make an excellent husband, I am willing to marry you.'

A Lover's Revenge.

When James Lick, the California millioniare, was a young man he fell in love with a miller's daughter in Pennsylvania. Young Lick faced the stern old miller and asked for the hand of his daughter. Now, James was a poor young man, but honest, industrious, and withal full of pride. The man refused James' request, and advised him not to marry until he had a competency to support a wife. These remarks were rather humiliating to young Lick's pride, and with emphasis he replied: "Sir, I shall see the day when your boasted mill would not make a respectable wheat bin for one I shall own." Years passed when James Lick erected in Santa Clara county, Cal., a mill the woodwork of which is solid mahogany. Shortly after its erection he had photographs taken of the inside and outside of his mill, and sent them to the miller who had refused him the hand of his daughter.

Proof Positive.

"What everybody says must be true," and therefore it is proof positive that Kendall's Spavin Cure will cure spavins, splints, curbs, and all unnatural enlargements, and will remove the bunch without blistering. Read their advertisement, for the remedy is having an unprecedented sale, which is entirely on its merits. It is now sold by nearly if not all druggists. Remember the name is Kendall's Spavin Cure.

Chased by Wolves.

During the winter of 1865-6, the writer was connected with a United States survey company, engaged in re-marking and staking the international line between the British Provinces and land belonging to the United States near the Red River of the North, on territory known at that time as Northern Minnesota. It was here that the fellowing adventure, which I am about to relate, occurred:

A company of three of us had been sent by the chief to explore a medium sized lake, through which the international survey ran. Our business was to ascertain how much of the lake lay within Uncle Sam's limits. We left camp about two o'clock in the afternoon, and after a weary tramp of five miles through the forest, our way obstructed by logs and underbrush, we arrived on the shores of the lake. It was a dismal place. No habitations near—nothing met the eye but the level stretch of ice upon the surface of the lake and a wilderness of tall pines, spruce and birch, surrounding it on all sides. Some time was consumed in finding the marks left there by a former surveying company, and ascertaining the course marked out across the lake. But at length this was accomplished, and we prepared to start for camp. One of my companions, whom I shall Leighton, had brought his skates. I never left camp without mine, not knowing how many weary footsteps they might save me, for the country was nearly one third swamps and small lakes. But the third man of our party had no skates. He was a good natured, rollicking Irishman by the name of Jimmy Maguire, and was what is technically known as an axe-man; that is to say, it was his duty to be always provided with an axe for the purpose of "blazing" trees, cutting poles, stakes, &c.

Jimmy had no skates, so after strapping ours on it was agreed that he should stand before us with his feet a little forward and braced for sliding, so that we could push him along as we skated across the lake.

It was coming on night and twilight as we started off, but a full moon was rising and we did not mind it, as we had just finished a hearty lunch of cold ham and bread that we had brought from camp with us. It was easy enough for us to attain a high rate of speed, and the Irishman undoubtedly never had such a slide before. The rate of speed at which we pushed him almost made his boots smoke.

In less than fifteen minutes we approached the shore and here we slackened our speed. Just then we saw some kind of animals darting in and out among the underbrush, like a lot of dogs at play. We stopped abruptly, almost pulling Jimmy over backwards, and proceeded to look more carefully. It was but a moment or two, and we ascertained the secret of the mystery, for one, two, four, six large timber wolves presently came out from the cover of the brush. Five of them raised their long noses and gave vent to the long blood-curdling howl with which frontiersmen are familiar.

'Howly St. Pathrick, we shall be aiten!' breathed Jimmy. It certainly looked as if his fears would be realized, for the wolves were apparently very hungry, and we noticed with a feeling of terror that they intended to attack us on the ice.

'No time to be lost, Colonel,' said Leighton, excitedly. 'We must put back across the lake and go around them.'

Hastily getting Jimmy before us, we shot off with arrow-like swiftness. But the wolves at once took to the ice and gave chase. They slipped considerably at first, but after getting under full headway they made long, rapid bounds and gained on us every moment. Besides, Jimmy impeded our progress very much. We could distinctly hear their short, panting breath and the swift patter of their feet.

'Colonel, we must dodge,' said Leighton, as he gave a quick glance over his shoulder.

'All ready,' I exclaimed. 'Now to the right,' and as I spoke we made a quick, short curve. The result was more than we expected. The wolves, of course, could not stop at once, but went sliding by us on their haunches, one of them so near as to snap at my legs. But in turning too short we upset Maguire, who went down in spite of us, else we would have gained a fair start on the wolves before they could have stopped their momentum so as to turn. As it was, Jimmy slewed round when we turned, and went sliding on his back in nearly the direction of the wolves. As the Irishman arose to to his feet the wolves turned and ran directly at him, only a few rods separating them, while my companion and myself were several rods away. But we had no idea of deserting the faithful fellow, though the sequel proved that Jimmy was master of the situation and the hero of the hour, after all.

As the wolves sprang with open jaws flecked with foam, Maguire unstrapped his trusty axe from his back and poised it for a blow. An opportunity was at hand. A long, gaunt wolf rushed forward and made a spring directly at him. With a swift circle of the axe he fairly split the brute's head in twain. Another wolf quickly followed, and the evincible axe crushed in his skull. The next wolf wavered and seemed inclined to back out, but Jimmy's blood was up, and with a quick spring he leveled a sidelong blow that broke the brute's back, and with fearful howls and writhings it floundered on the ice. This was the end. The remaining three wolves slunk away and were soon lost to sight in the gloom.

'Howly Moses! did the snarlin' bastes thing to ate a living Irishman wid such a shillaly as this axe ferninst him?' said Jimmy, excitedly.

We tarried long enough to secure the hides as trophies for Jimmy, and reached camp in a couple of hours without further accident. Had it not been for Jimmy and his axe the adventure might have had a different termination.

Curious End to a Horse Race.

Recently a cattle dealer and a farmer who prided themselves on the superiority of their respective horses, laid a bet of £50 each on who would first reach a certain inn in Linlithgow, driving from Edinburgh. The money was duly staked with the innkeeper, the day set, and the conditions written out—viz.: first at goal, in full harness, to receive £100. During the interval one of the gentlemen began to see he was likely to lose, and formed a plan to circumvent his friend, which he managed in the following way: On starting he allowed himself to get rather behind, and on coming up to Haymarket station turned quietly in, where a special engine and horse box stood waiting, by means of which, horse, gig and man were soon carried to Linlithgow. The other gentleman kept driving on, although he was surprised, on looking round again and again, to see nothing of his opponent. But surprise gave way to rage when he arrived at the inn twenty minutes late, and was told that the money had been claimed by his friend; the other now wished to make a joke of the whole affair, and offered back £50; but he who had driven the road refused any compromise, and declares that he will take the case to law.

EDITOR'S TABLE.

The LEONARD SCOTT PUBLISHING Co., 41 Barclay St., New York, have promptly issued their reprint of the British Quarterly Review for October. The following is a brief account of the contents:

'Tennyson's Poems.' This is not an analysis of Tennyson's works, the object of the paper being to account for and justify his popularity, 'and to show the limits of his enduring fame.'

'The Lord's Supper Historically Considered.' A statement of some general principles which have been derived from historical research showing their application to the great Eucharistic controversies; and a discussion of the efforts to give intellectual expression to the main problems attaching to this ordinance.

'The Art of Singing, Past and Present.' The writer, Vernon Lee, gives a history of the rise and fall of that art, which he looks on as almost lost, though he thinks it might be revived, should it become the subject of more intelligent interest.

'A Dutchman on South Africa.' E. Lecky reviews an account of the Boers, their language and country, at the time of the annexation of the Transvaal.

'Latham on Examinations.'

'Sir James Outram,' a recital of some of the chief incidents of his career, such as taming the Bheels and Kolees; the first wars in Afghanistan, etc., etc.

'Exploration and Mission Work in Africa.' An examination of the rise, progress and present condition of the great movement towards civilizing Africa.

'The Practice of an Architect,' an answer by T. Roger Smith to an article that appeared in a former number of this Review, entitled 'The Profession of an Architect.' It challenges the truth of almost every assertion to the detriment of the profession made in that article.

'Lord Northbrook and Lord Lytton,' a comparison of their Indian administrations, showing the contrast between the strong ruler and the weak.

'Contemporary Literature,' full, as usual, of brief notices of recent publications.

The periodicals reprinted by The Leonard Scott Publishing Co., 41 Barclay street, N. Y. are as follows: The London Quarterly, Edinburgh, Westminster, and British Quarterly Reviews, and Blackwood's Magazine. Price, $4 a year for any one, or only $15 for all, and the postage is prepaid by the publishers.

AN exchange prints a lengthy article on "Science at Breakfast." Valuable space wasted. Science at breakfast is getting away with four slices of ham and a half dozen eggs while your neighbor is unfolding his napkin.

Get Out Doors.

The close confinement of all factory work, gives the operatives pallid faces, poor appetite, languid, miserable feelings, poor blood, inactive liver, kidneys and urinary troubles, and all the physicians and medicine in the world cannot help them unless they get out of doors or use Hop Bitters, the purest and best remedy, especially for such cases, having abundance of health, sunshine and rosy cheeks in them. They cost but a trifle. See another column.—Christian Recorder.

THE LATEST NEWS.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—Mr. Parnell visited Limerick to-day. He was met a mile from town by a reception committee and the corporation, and was escorted by a procession of 50,000, including 3,000 horsemen. Messrs. Dillon, O'Shaughnessy and W. O'Sullivan, members of Parliament, spoke at a subsequent meeting. There were 150 extra constabulary on duty, but the military were confined to their barracks.

Before the court of sessions in Bantry to-day, in the case of Messrs. Healy and Walsh, accused of having attempted to intimidate Mr. Manning, a tenant farmer, the prosecution declared that when the defendants visited Mr. Manning, they told him that his crops would be left to rot if the farm was not surrendered to the evicted tenant The counsel for the prosecution was instructed by the Attorney General to ask that the defendants be committed for trial.

After some further argument of counsel both of the accused were committed for trial.

During the proceedings at Bantry yesterday Manning said he had no intention of prosecuting Healy and Walsh until the police visited him. The police gave evidence that Manning said he was afraid he would be shot. On this evidence the defendants were committed for trial. They were subsequently released on bail of $1000.

An Old Hunter's Death.

LACKAWAXEN, Pa., Nov. 1.—Jonas Shaffer, aged about 70 years, died Saturday in Blooming Grove, Pike county. He was a famous bear hunter. He was the father of Jonas Gil., and Brock Shaffer, all hunters and guides in the Pike woods. The old gentleman's death was the result of injuries received by the attack of a vicious bull two weeks ago. Mr. Shaffer was walking through a lot where the bull was kept. The animal rushed upon him before he could get beyond its reach. The bull caught the hunter on its horns and tossed him over a stone wall. The animal jumped over the wall and tossed the old gentleman back again into the lot. He was found by one of his sons. Several ribs were broken, and his body was terribly torn by the bull's horns.

Mr. Shaffer is the fourth one of the old-time hunters of northern Pennsylvania hunters who have met tragic deaths after years spent among the dangers of hunting and trapping bears and other wild animals. Sile Reeves was killed by a falling tree in Potter county last winter. A short time before that Sid Cody was caught in one of his bear traps in the Forest county woods, and held there until he died and was eaten by wild beasts. An old hunter named Pettingill was killed by a runaway horse in Monroe county a year or so since. All of these men had narrowly escaped death scores of times in hand-to-hand fights with wounded animals. There are only a few of the old-time hunters left in this region. Jacob Benson, Marcus Killam, one or two of the Kimbles, Fin. Treple, and Ed. Quick are among them.

Indian Affairs.

CHEYENNE, W. T., Nov. 1.—A dispatch to The Leader from the camp on White River says that Agent Berry and party, including Meacham, of the Ute Commission, and a few Utes, arrived there on the 28th direct from Los Pinos Agency. Berry, upon his own report, is a much abused man.

GALVESTON, Texas, Nov. 1.—A dispatch to The News from San Antonio says: "Information has been received that thirty-five warriors of Victoria's band, who escaped at the fight of Las Castillas, after crossing the Rio Grand at Ojo Caliente, attacked a picket belonging to the Tenth Cavalry and killed three men. They were finally driven to the Mexican side by reinforcements."

The Walking Match.

LONDON, Nov. 1. — The walking match for the championship of the world began this morning. Six contestants, namely, Littlewood, Pegram, Brown, Rowell, Dobler and Howard, were started at 1 o'clock by Sir John Astley on one of the best tracks ever laid in Agricultural Hall. At 3 o'clock Littlewood, Pegram, Brown and Rowell had made 16 miles each, Dobler 15, and Howard 14.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 1—Charles O'Neil was shot in the abdomen and fatally wounded in a street brawl to-day. Augustus Blackstone, colored, is under arrest, but says O'Neil assaulted him and he was trying to get away when some one else shot O'Neil.

African Barbarism.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—News have been received from the west coast of Africa of the death of Chaca, the Governor of Whydah, a province of Dahomey. The funeral was to be celebrated by a massacre of natives, after which the King had announced his intention of holding the annual celebration in memory of his father. The celebration was to last four months, during which 200 captured chiefs will be beheaded. The English refuse to go to the celebration.

The Eastern Question.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—A dispatch from Paris says: Telegrams have been received stating that Greek agents are intriguing among the Turks, Albanians and Montenegrins to prevent a solution, in order to irritate the Powers to resume the settlement of the various questions.

A dispatch from Athens states that the Porte is sending troops and ammunition to the Greek frontier. Unless the Turks retire to the new frontier, war is certain.

Telegraphic Notes.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 1.—Mrs. Parkes, who was struck by a rocket on Friday night, died to-day. The rocket was one of a bunch that accidentally caught fire.

BOSTON, Nov. 1.—The Austrian bark Leandro, from Leghorn, reports that on October 20, off Pernambuco, she picked up the first officer and one of the crew of the British bark County of Richmond, which foundered October 14. They were on a raft for six days without food or water. The captain and the remainder of the crew were drowned. The County of Richmond sailed from New York October 4th for St. Thomas.

Almost Young Again.

My mother was afflcted a long time with neuralgia and a dull, heavy inactive condition of the whole system, headache, nervous prostration, and was almost helpless. No physicians or medicines did her any good. Three months ago she began to use Hop Bitters, with such good effect that she seems and feels young again, although 70 years old. We think there is no other medicine fit to use in the family.—A lady in Providence, R. I.—Journal. 43-2t

Permanently Cured of Piles.

Hon. G. H. Rice, late R. R. Commissioner of Vermont, writes:

MILTON, Vt., Sept. 16.

I have been a great sufferer from Piles, having had it in its blind phase for years. About two years ago, when the disease began to assume the bleeding form, I tried Kidney-Wort, and used about a half-dozen packages, which I believe effected a permanent cure. From my own experience and that of others I am acquainted with, I became satisfied that Kidney-Wort possessed remarkable virtues, and probably should have purchased an interest in its sale had I been possessed of sufficient means.

Truly yours,

G. H. RICE.

JEWELRY AND SILVERWARE.

Mr. F. C. Richards has just received at his store on High street, opp. Bush's Arcade, an entire new stock of Jewelry and Silverware, embracing gold watches and chains, necklaces, bracelets, etc., and silverware of every description. Mr. Richards is an excellent judge of this line of goods, and the public may depend upon it that his new stock is full and complete and first-class throughout.

Gentlemen or ladies needing anything in this line will find it to their advantage to call and examine these goods early. oc30d1w1

HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE.

AN ILLUSTRATED WEEKLY—16 PAGES. SUITED TO BOYS AND GIRLS OF FROM SIX TO SIXTEEN YEARS OF AGE.

Volume II. commences Nov. 2, 1880.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SUBSCRIBE.

Within a year of its first appearance, HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE has secured a leading place among the periodicals designed for juvenile readers. The object of those who have the paper in charge is to provide for boys and girls from the age of six to sixteen a weekly treat in the way of entertaining stories, poems, historical sketches, and other attractive reading matter, with profuse and beautiful illustrations, and at the same time to make its spirit and influence harmonize with the moral atmosphere which pervades every cultivated Christian household. This important design they endeavor to carry out by combining the best literary and artistic talent, so that fiction shall appear in bright and innocent colors, sober facts assume such a holiday dress as to be no longer dry or dull, and mental exercise, in the solution of puzzles, problems, and other devices, become a delight.

HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE, $1.50 per Year, Postage prepaid.

Single numbers four cents each.

The Bound Volume for 1880, containing the first fifty-two numbers, will be ready early in November. Price, $3.00, postage prepaid. Cover for YOUNG PEOPLE for 1880, 35 cents; postage, 13 cents additional.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS are the best of all purgatives for family use. They are the product of long, laborious and successful chemical investigation, and their extensive use by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, prove them the best and most effective purgative Pills that medical science can devise. Being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use, in intrinsic value and curative powers no other Pills can be compared with them, and every person knowing their virtues will use them when needed. They keep the system in perfect order, and maintain in healthy action the whole machinery of life. Mild, searching and effectual, they are especially adapted to the needs of the digestive apparatus, derangements of which they prevent and cure, if timely taken. They are the best and safest physic to employ for children and weakened constitutions, where a mild but effectual cathartic is required.

Valuable Farm at Public Sale.

Will be offered at Public Sale on the premises in Marion township, on the following described real estate late of John Beatty, deceased, to-wit: All that certain messuage or tract of land situated in Marion township, Centre county, Pa., bounded and described as follows: By lands of Hugheston heirs, McCalmont heirs, Judge Divens, John Decker, John Irvin, W. W. Beck and Henry Orndorf, containing 180 acres and allowance. There is thereon erected a two-story dwelling house, bank barn and other outbuildings, a never-failing well of water at the door, a good sized orchard of choice fruit.

Tuesday, Dec. 14, 1880, at 1 o'clock P. M.,

This farm is in a good state of cultivation. Portions of it are underlaid with iron ore of good quality. There is limestone on the farm for liming purposes, of which some has been taken out and applied to the land. This farm is well worth the attention of those wishing to purchase a good farm, being smooth and easily worked. It is within about 1¼ miles of Jacksonville, three miles of Howard station on the Bald Eagle Valley Railroad, and eight miles of Bellefonte. This farm is convenient to schools, churches and mills. Persons wishing further information will please address or call upon W. C. BEATTY, residing on the place, post office address, Walker, Centre county, Pa.

A dower of three thousand one hundred and ninety-eight dollars and sixty-six cents to remain in the farm for the widow of the late George Hoy, deceased. FARM AND IRON ORE MINE AT ORPHANS' COURT SALE.

WILL BE EXPOSED AT PUBLIC SALE on the premises, by order of the Orphans' Court of Centre county, Pa., on Wednesday, Nov. 10th, 1880,

All that messuage or tract of land known as the

James A. McCalmont Farm

Located in Marion township, Centre county, Pa., about one mile west of Jacksonville and eight miles east of Bellefonte—a first class Nittany Valley farm, bounded by lands of W. W. Beck, Joseph Long, heirs of John Beatty, and heirs of Thomas Huston, deceased, containing about 193 acres, net measure. 150 acres are cleared and in a high state of cultivation, divided into convenient fields under good fences. The balance of the land is covered with thriving timber.

A Good Mansion House,

Two tenement Houses, frame Barn, with other outbuildings, with wells and cisterns convenient.

This farm contains the celebrated IRON ORE BANK known as the McCALMONT ORE, which is of the best quality, analyzing 56 per cent. carbonate of iron, with the smallest trace of phosphorus; in addition to which there are indications of ore of same quality in the fields adjoining, which can be washed from the earth in large quantities. Water ninety feet below the surface.

This farm is located in a good neighborhood, convenient to schools, churches, mills, and within three miles of Howard station on the Bald Eagle Valley Railroad, to which the road descends all the way.

Persons wishing to view the property before the day of sale are invited to call on James S. and Robert McCalmont, who reside on the premises.

Sale will begin at 1 o'clock P. M. of said day.

TERMS.—One-third of the purchase money to be paid on confirmation of sale, one-third in one year, and the balance in two years thereafter; the two latter payments to be secured by bonds and mortgage on the premises, with interest.

Van Dyke's SULPHUR SOAP

Is superior to all other soaps. It is combined with Sulphur in its pure, unadulterated state, which enters the pores of the skin, being absorbed into the blood through the minute capillaries, and thus acts upon the skin, whether it is healthy or in a diseased condition, both locally and constitutionally, thereby eliminating all impurities from the blood, and exciting the skin to healthy action. It produces a fineness, purity, and freshness of the complexion which is unequalled, and can be produced by no other means. No toilet, nursery or bath room is complete without it. It makes the skin pure, clear, white and healthy; is cleansing, deodorizing, disinfecting, soothing, healing and purifying; removes dandruff, chafing, ulcers, sores, eruptions, roughness and redness of the skin; relieves itching, burning and stinging of the skin, and irritation of biting and stinging insects; will relieve itching piles when nothing else will have any effect. Ask for VAN DYKE'S SULPHUR SOAP; insist upon it, and take no imitation. Sold by druggists. Aschenbach & Miller, proprietors, 301 Callowhill street, Philadelphia. 12-29-1y

Women and Politics.

From the Brooklyn Eagle.

'Now, my dear,' says Mr. Spoopendyke, 'if you will come and sit down here, I'll explain the political situation to you. I am glad to see you take an interest in such things, for everybody ought to thoroughly understand what is going on in the country.'

'I've been reading about them every day,' rejoined Mrs. Spoopendyke, 'and I think I know a good deal about politics now,' and the good lady turned turkey red with the idea that she had excited her husband's admiration. 'I think Mr. Garfield is too sweet to live, and that dear Mr. Hancock is just as nice as he can be. They are ever so much better than that odious English and Arthur Oh! if I was a man I would vote for Garfield and Hancock.'

'That ain't the way to talk politics,' sneered Mr. Spoopendyke. 'I thought you said you knew something about it! Got an idea that Garfield and Hancock are some kind of a bonnet, haven't you? Well, they ain't a foreign Bible society, either.'

'Do you like English and Arthur best? They may be good men for the Presidency, but I see more in the papers about Garfield and Hancock, and I thought they must be splendid. Perhaps I was mistaken.'

'Garfield and Hancock ain't running together, I tell ye,' retorted Mr. Spoopendyke. They are running against each other.'

'There's another thing,' said Mrs. Spoopendyke complacently; 'If they are doing that, I perfectly agree with you that English and Arthur are the best. They are perfect gentlemen, and Mr. Arthur is so handsome! I saw his picture——'

'Don't you know anything at all, scarcely?' demanded Mr. Spoopendyke. 'English and Arthur ain't twins; they are running against each other, too. Where'd you find out about politics, anyway—in a cook book? P'raps you think these candidates are vegetables, Mrs. Spoopendyke. But they ain't. They're men with arms and legs; they ain't things to make a pudding of.'

'Certainly; I know that,' responded Mrs. Spoopendyke, cheerfully, 'but if Mr. Garfield is running against Mr. Hancock, and Mr. English is running against Mr. Arthur, I don't see what we are going to do. How are you going to choose?'

'But they've ot to run against each other,' explained Mr. Spoopendyke, with rising emphasis. 'You don't suppose candidates all run together like a lot of hens, do ye?'

'If Mr. Garfield and Mr. Hancock run against each other, won't Mr. Hancock have the best of it?'

'Why should he?' demanded Mr. Spoopendyke.

''Cause he's so big. If they were running together he'd get beat, 'cause he's too fat. He couldn't—'

'Does anybody in the country know what yo're talking about? Do you s'pose they stand and bump up against each other like a couple of freight trains? Got any idea they're going to roll up their trousers and run a leg race? I tell ye Hancock is running for one President and Garfield is running for another. Now d'ye understand?'

'Oh, that's it. Now I begin to see into it,' returned Mrs. Spoopendyke, joyously. 'So if you want to vote for two men for President, you must vote for English and Arthur. I understand it perfectly now. But—'

'Oh, yes, you understand it, don't ye?' yelled Spoopendyke; 'you're the politician of seven ages. All you need is a registration book and a brass band to be a whole political campaign. I tell ye Hancock is running for President and so is Garfield, and Arthur and English are running for Vice President. Can you understand that?'

'Yes, I do; but do you think Arthur and English will get it? I read in one—'

'Get it? They both can't get it. Only one of 'em can get it,' exclaimed Spoopendyke suppressing his passion. 'What do you think the Vice Presidency is—a pair of pigeon holes? One of 'em will be President and the other Vice President. Now can you bore that through your skull and remember it?'

Why, of course; but I feel sorry for poor Mr. Garfield and poor Mr. Hancock. They'll be awfully disappointed but of course we can't help it. Which will be President, do you think, Mr. Arthur or Mr. Eng—'

'Dod gast it!' raved Mr. Spoopendyke. 'You don't know enough to go to sleep when you're tired. Don't I tell you Garfield or Hancock will be President. Say it over until you can remember it. The tickets are Hancock and English, and Garfield and Arthur. Comprehend that?'

'Why, certainly. I saw those names on the banners. I remember now. Which will be elected?'

'That's the question,' rejoined Mr. Spoopendyke, sarcastically. If Mr. Eng'ish can carry his own State and Ohio, he will be elected, but if Mr. Garfield can carry his own State and Indiana, he will have an excellent show.'

'What will Mr. Hancock and Mr. Arthur carry?' asked Mrs. Spoopendyke, with an air of absorbing interest.

'Carry?' howled Mr. Spoopendyke, 'they'll carry swill to the pigs, and that's more'n you know how to do. What d'ye 'spose they'll carry?'

'I suppose Mr. Arthur will carry Mr. English's State, won't he, and his own? And Mr. Hancock will carry Mr. Garfield's State and Governor's Ireland. Ain't that where he lives?' I don't see what the want of each other's States. They ought—'

'Oh! you've got it!' shrieked Mr. Spoopendyke. 'You've got it boiled down. You only need a heavy rain and the side door of a bar-room to be an election day. What you want is a lot of blots and your name spelled wrong to be a poll list. Don't I tell you that two of them are running against the other two, and the two that get the most States will be elected? And if a man can't carry his own State he's liable to be licked? Can't ye understand that?'

'I see; I see,' said Mrs. Spoodendyke. 'It's as plain as day now. But suppose they all carry their own States, won't it be funny?'

'He, he, he,' giggled Mr. Spoopendyke, with horrid grimaces. 'It'll be the funniest thing ever known. If they do that, you just dramatize it. It'll beat nine circuses in a row. How's each going to carry his own State? Think he is going to turn it up on one end and roll it like a hoop?'

'I don't know,' said Mrs. Spoopenkyke, reflecting. I don't exactly understand how they do it, but they ought to know what they are going to do before they accept the convention. I read—'

'Who cares a dog gasted cent what ye read,' pealed forth Mr. Spoopendyke. You don't know enough about politics to stuff a chicken. Who said anything about any measly convention? Git into bed, will ye? You got an idea that you put candidates into a pot like turnips and poke 'em with a fork, and the one that's done first is elected. Oh! you're right—you've got the sense of it. With your statesmanship, all you want is four amendments and a motion to adjourn, to be an act of Congress,' and Mr. Spoopendyke cast his clothing into a corner, flopped into bed and pulled the covers over his ears.

'I don't care,' mused Mrs. Spoopendyke as she turned out the gas and then began puttering around to see if everything was all right; 'I know that if Mr. English carries Mr Garfield's State and Mr Garfield carries Mr. English's State, it will go hard with Hancock and Arthur, and Mr. Arthur is such a handsome man,' and Mrs. Spoopendyke sidled into bed, planted her feet in the pit of Mr. Spoopendyke's stomach and went to sleep, dreaming that that worthy was running for the office of notary public and had carried every State in the Union, including 'Governor's Ireland.'

Personal.

Edmund Yates, the English writer, says that the only rival to English womanhood is American womanhood.

A lady has been a member of the Sunday-school of the First Baptist church, of Philadelphia, sixty-five years.

Mr. Robert Burdett, the Burlington Hawkeye man, with his wife, will make Philadelphia his home this winter.

Senator McDonald, of Indiana, will be married at Washington next February to Mrs. Bernard, a widow of that city.

Colonel Thomas A. Scott, of Philadelphia, has contributed $7,000 toward building an Episcopal church at Clifton, Pa.

Miss Eliza Jane Cate was recently elected a corresponding member of the New Hampshire historical society—the first woman who ever received that honor.

A level-headed editor says: "Any county fair in America will call together a dozen women whose good looks would make Mrs. Langtry sick abed for a week."

"Dame Rumor" asserts—and most emphatically, too—that Rev. Philips Brooks, the great Boston divine, will shortly lead to the altar a well known Philadelphia lady.

Samuel Watkins, a prominent citizen of Nashville, Tenn., who died in that city on Saturday, bequeathed $130,000 to the city for the establishment of a polytechnic institution.

Judge Elisha Carpenter, of the Supreme Court of Connecticut, has had an attact of paralysis affecting his left side. His brain is unaffected, but he will not be able to attend to his duties for some time.

General Grant, when at Plymouth, Mass., the other day, examined with interest the sword of Captain Miles Standish, and visited the famous rock with his wife, who placed her cheek upon it. A file of veteran soldiers was presented to the General, who bowed and said: "Gentleman, I am glad to meet you, and see so many veterans. I thought they had all gone west, where they say we have nothing but veterans." The General walked down the line and shook hands with each.

Wendell Phillips in speaking recently of the smallness of his library said: "I have had so many places to put my money that I could not afford a large library. Then a citizen does not need a large library here, where we are so well supplied with public libraries; one needs the encyclopedias, dictionaries and some general works of reference only. Mr. Sumner did not have an extensive library, but when he wanted to prepare an article or a speech, on the slavery in Liberia for example, he would gather from all the evidences within his reach all the works on that subject, sometimes four hundred or more volumes. On entering his room these would be found on the table, on the floor, in the windows, scattered all over the room, some open in front, some near the close, others in the middle; and Mr. Sumner would ransack every one of them."

SUMMARY OF THE NEWS.

Cut Off in the Bloom of Young Manhood.

NEWARK, O., Oct. 27. — Sanford Cunningham, a well known and popular young citizen of this city, aged about twenty-eight years, and only son of Wm. M. Cunningham, Statistical Clerk in the office of Secretary of State, died at Columbus last night. He had been an invalid for nearly ten years—a victim of that dreaded disease, consumption. He went to Columbus on Wednesday last, and while in his father's office was taken with a severe hemorrhage and was unable to be moved from the office for several days. He was finally removed to the Chittenden Hotel, where he died. He was a young man of fine intellect and unusually high social entertainment, and counted his friends in nearly every State in the Union. Although his death was not unexpected his many friends will feel his loss very deeply. His remains were brought here for burial.

The Afghan Ameer Murdered.

LAHORE, Oct. 27.—It is reported in Pershawur that anarchy reigns in Cabul and that the Ameer has been murdered. There has been no news by post for several days. The news relative to the murder of the Ameer and the prevalence of anarchy in Caluo is from the Civil and Military Gazette of Lahore, an authority undoubted. The India office here, however, has no confirmation of the report.

A Farmer Probably Fataly Injured by His Hired Boy.

CANTON, O., Oct. 27.—On Saturday night Zeph Miller, a farmer, residing near Fulton, this county, went home drunk, and began abusing his hired boy, Harry Deaters, aged eighteen, who turned upon and struck him with a club, inflicting injuries which it is feared will prove fatal.

The Agitation in Ireland.

DUBLIN, October 26.—J. B. Killen, speaking at a banquet in Galway, declared that every letter that came across the Atlantic brought Ireland more closely to America. They were in fact no longer Ireland but one of the states of the United States. The Inspector General of the Constabulary has issued a circular requiring all constables to furnish a weekly statement showing the number of arms and quantity of ammunition in their districts, the names to whom consigned, by whom received, class of persons who brought them, and for what purpose purchased.

The Times says: "It is considered unnecessary to strengthen the powers of the Irish executive for the repression of outrages. Parliament, therefore, is not likely to be summoned before the usual time. In the meanwhile the cabinet will frame the promised measure of land reform.

Healey, secretary to Parnell, and member of the Land League, was arrested at Bantry to day, at the instance of the Attorney General, on a charge of libelling a landlord in one of his speeches. Other arrests are expected to immediatcly follow.

The Irish Times states that Wm. E. Forster, Chief Secretary for Ireland, has placed his resignation in the hands of Premier Gladstone. The statement is authoritatively denied.

George J. Dodson, President of the Local Government Board, speaking at Scarborough, said if the government were satisfied ordinary law was not sufficient to maintain order in Ireland, they would not shirk in consequence of any threats from asking extraordinary legislation.

The Daily News asks why this is not done immediately. It says if the state of things is as bad as the government have reason to believe, the course they propose, that is, prosecution, is not that which such an occasion would seem to demand.

The Post says: Justin McCarty, Home Rule member for Longford, has joined the Land League as a protest against prosecutions.

Emancipation Memorial.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—The erection of a memorial to perpetuate the labors of Thomas Clarkson as an advocate of slave emancipation was begun on Monday at Wisbach, when the first stone was laid. There will be a statute with an inscription, with bas reliefs. The memorial was designed by the late Sir Gilbert Scott and will cost £2,000, of which £600 e still required.

A Freight Brakeman's Death.

COLUMBIA, Oct. 23.—Jacob Mahn, a Pennsylvania Railroad freight brakeman, was struck by an overhead bridge near Mountville last evening, knocked off the top of a refrigerator car upon which he was riding, and instantly killed. The deceased was 38 years old, had run on the road but a short time, and leaves a wife and six children. About one year ago a little four year old son was killed while riding on the freight cars at this place.

The Chrsstiancy Divorce Case.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Judge Cox, in the Equity court to-day, made an order in the Christiancy divorce suit, reducing the allowance of alimony pending the result of trial, from $150 to $100 per month. The reduction was granted on the strength of an affidavit of Minister Christiancy. He alleges he is unable to pay a greater sum by reason of heavy indebtedness and the needs of the rest of his family. He also asserts that none of the charges of cruelty or personal ill-usage can be proved otherwise than by false testimony; that he believes it necessary for the promotion of his rights that he should be present at the taking of testimony; that thus far he has been unable to obtain a short leave of absence from his post, and that he intends to avail himself of the first opportunity and return home and defend the suit in person.

Exodus of Voters.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—The exodus of voters from the various departments of the government here has been very marked this week, and it can be truthfully said that there is not a man in the District of Columbia who is entitled to a vote in any of the close or doubtful States. There are also but few of the more prominent officials who have not also departed for their homes, and by the day of election it is probable that the only cabinet officer left to represent the government will be the Attorney General whose presence here is indispensable in view of the fact that the machinery of the government for guarding the purity of the election is under the jurisdiction of his department.

The Great Storm.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—There have been serious floods at Banbury, Bournemouth, Chester, Coleshell, Derby and Darlington, causing much damage to crops and other property. The telegraph wires in Edinburgh were blown down and the new pier works at Hartlepool were seriously damaged. Thousands of acres of land are inundated in various parts of Leicestershire. Many trawlers are missing and it is feared their crews, numbering in all, forty-two men, have been lost. Numerous vessels have been wrecked during the storm on various parts of the coast with loss of life. There were seven hours continuous rain yesterday in the city of Reggio del Calabria, Italy. Seventeen persons were killed in two neighboring villages, their cottages being swept down.

The Diamond Robbers.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 30.—No trace of the parties who garroted Mr. Carr has been found, although the police and detectives have been busy. Near the place where the robbery took place a locket and a portion of the gold chain were found. The same night this occurrence took place, a commercial traveler, stopping at the St. Charles Hotel, was approached by one of three men whom he met on Wood street, and asked if he did not want to go to a ball in Lafayette Hall. Suspecting that all was not right he exhibited a revolver when the parties bid him good night and passed on.

Pistol Practice.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 30.—A pair of Pipetown roughs, named Connors and McFadden, drew their "pops" on the corner of Third avenue and Wood street about 10 o'clock last night, and blazed away at a crowd on the opposite side of the street. Three shots were fired, but fortunately no one was hurt. Lieutenant O'Brian and Officer Carr collared the shooters, but were forced to rap for assistance on account of the big crowd which came to the rescue of the wiry prisoners. With considerable difficulty they were landed in the Central station.

Bold Attempt to Rob a Bank.

STEUBENVILLE, O., Oct. 30.—A bold attempt at bank robbery was made at Wellsburg last night. Watchman Roberts, of the National bank, was going up the steps into the bank when he was attacked by three men and knocked down with a billy. He regained his feet and struck one, knocking him down. He then gave the alarm and a crowd collected and arrested one man, the other two escaping. The men answer the description of a gang who were burning barns in this vicinity for some time past.

Sunday Shaving.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 30.—Wm. A. Ross, of the Law and Order Society, yesterday appeared before the Mayor and made an information against Andrew Stripe, a barber, whose shop is on Main street, Thirty-sixth ward, charging him with carrying on his wordly occupation on Sunday. Stripe was notified by Officer Hoch and gave bail for a hearing.

Typhoid Fever.

CANTON, Oct. 30.—The doctors report the typhoid fever prevailing to a great extent in this neighborhood. It is remarkable to say that eleven persons have been prostrated at the residence of C. K. Wackerly, of whom one has died. Four are convalescent, and Dr. Porter, the attending physician, thinks the others will recover.

Business Failures.

BUFFALO, Oct. 30.—G. W. Hayward & Co., wholesale coffee and dried fruit dealers, have made an assignment to P. D. Beard. Liabilities, $100,000. There are preferred creditors to the amount of $23,720. The immediate cause of the failure was the suspension of C. Risley & Co., New York.

One of the Alpena's Victims.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—John B. Patterson, who was lost on the steamer, Alpena, was a clerk in the Internal Revenue Bureau on leave of absence. He was appointed June 16, 1877, and was one of the most intelligent men in the Department. He was a one-armed, ex-Union soldier, 40 years of age, and was a native of Pennsylvania, but a resident of Salem, Ill.

Charged with Diamond Smuggling

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Special Treasury agent Brackett arrested Achilles Seligman of No. 21 John Street, on the charge of smuggling a quantity of diamonds on board the steamer Labrador, which arrived here on the 12th of October. Mr. Seligman is agent in this city of Citron & Co., Paris, diamond dealers. Captain Brackett also seized a number of precious stones. Mr. Seligman was taken before United States Commissioner Shields and held in $5,000 for examination to-morrow.

Railway Accidents.

ALLIANCE, Ohio, Oct. 25.—During a dense fog yesterday morning a section of an east-bound freight train ran into the preceding section near this place, badly damaging the engine and several cars. William Siefert, a brakesman, was crushed to death. Engineer James Schultz and conductor Matthew Jaques were painfully injured.

Horses Burned to Death.

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—A despatch from Quincy says: This morning a large livery stable on Fourth street was burned, together with a large number of hacks and carriages and forty-two horses, including the stallion Ambog, owned by Wash. Corbin, valued at $10,000. Total loss, $27,000, fully insured.

The Destruction of Victoria's Band.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—Despatches to the War Department confirm the reported killing of the Indian raider Victoria, and the greater portion of his band by the Mexican troops.

Burdette's Boy.

The boy runs about 150 miles a day and wouldn't quit then if it didn't grow dark. He is very busy. He has all the care of me, and, in addition to his regular routine duties, he manages a thousand things no one else would think of. Yesterday morning before 10 o'clock, he picked and ate, regardless of maturity and color, a pint of wild strawberries, followed a wagon half a mile down the road, got lost in the woods, choaked up the fountain with gravel, fell out of a hammock, stung himself with a bee, ate some strange looking berries that his mother knows are deadly poison, played with a mad dog (his aunt says she knows it was mad), talked to a tramp who came to kidnap him (it was an honest farmer coming in to the circus, but the boy's aunt and mother united on the tramp and kidnap theory,) stepped on a red lizzard, built a dam, and fell into a brook. I helped him build the dam; in fact, I confess that I built the greater part of it, and enticed the prince to assist, but he fell into the brook himself, and all statements to the effect that I pushed him in, and laughed at him and encouraged him to enjoy it, are simply campaign stories circulated for political effects.—Burlington Hawkeye.

Killed by an Elephant.

An elephant belonging to John Robinson's circus got loose at Charlotte, N. C. recently while removing the animals from a freight car. The car on which the elephant, the largest of the three, called "Chief," had been brought from Concord was standing just above the Trade-street crossing, and a large crowd had gathered around to watch the process of unloading. Immediately after giving warning to the bystanders, John King, a powerfully built man, stepped around to Chief's head and was in the act of turning him around when the crowd heard him call the elephant by name in a frightened tone and the next moment they saw the enraged animal turn upon his keeper and crush him against the car. King sank to the ground without a groan, and the men who were with him fled precipitately. The crowd scattered up Trade street, and the wildest confusion followed. The men were afraid to approach the infuriated animal, and King was allowed to remain for several minutes on the ground where he had fallen. The elephant surveyed the scene for an instant, gave a short and started at a brisk pace up the railroad track. As soon as he was out of reach King was picked up. He died about the hour that the news of the death of Jim Robinson at Cincinnate was flashed over the wires. The elephant was afterwards captured.

PARROT IN THE WITNESS BOX.—About six months ago a parrot belonging to the Sisters of St. Boniface Convent disappeared, and was recently found in the possession of Pierre Mallet, who lives on Lapeyrouse street, New Orleans. A demand being made upon him he refused to surrender the bird, claiming that he purchased it, and will not give it up unless paid an extravagant price. The Sisters have therefore instituted a suit in the Second Justice's Court to recover their bird, which they value at on hundred dollars. The parrot speaks German fluently, and its owners claim that they will have no difficulty in proving their property. Upon the trial the bird is to be brought into court to tell what he knows about kidnapping. The bird is well known to the pupils who attend school at the Convent, and it is said that a test of identification will consist in the bird's obedience to a certain sign known only to its rightful owner. The trial of this case promises to be both interesting and amusing.

Hyenas.

The following is the manner of catching hyenas as related by an Afghan chieif:

"When you have tracked the beast to his den, you take a rope with two slip-knots upon it, in your right hand, and with your left holding a felt cloak before you, you go boldly but quickly in. The animal does not know the nature of the danger and therefore retires to the back of his den, but you may always tell where his head is by the glare of his eyes. You keep on moving gradually toward him on your knees, and when you are within distance throw the cloak over his head, close with him and take care he does not free himself. The beast is so frightened that he cowers back, and, though he may bite the felt, he cannot turn his neck round to hurt you; so you quietly feel for his forelegs, slip the knots over them, and with one strong pull, draw them tight up to the back of his neck and tie them there. The beast is now your own, and you can do what you like with him. We generally take those we catch home to the kraal, and hunt them on the plain with bridles in their mouths, that our dogs may be taught not to fear the brutes when they meet them wild. Hyenas are also taken alive by the Arabs by a very similar method, except that a wooden gag is used instead of a felt cloak. The similarity in the mode of capture in two such distant countries as are Algeria and Afghanistan, and by two races so different, is remarkable. From the fact that the Afghans consider that the feat requires great presence of mind, and no instance being given of a man having died of a bite received in a clumsy attempt, we may infer that the Afghan hyena is more powerful or more ferocious than his Afghan congener."

Fresh Fashion Notes.

Some of the handkerchiefs of lace and muslin are so arranged that the lace is permanently tied in a pretty knot, and the real fastening is carefully concealed. This device will be a blessing to the women who really respect their lace and grudge creasing it.

The theory is that silk muslin cannot be washed, but it is easy enough to renew the freshness of a tie made from this material by taking it around a bottle in the same way that one arranges lace for washing, soaping it thoroughly, soaking it a few hours, rinsing and drying on the bottle.

Lace flounces are again to be worn, and upon rich evening dresses at a very elegant ball lately given in Paris two grand dames were satin dresses so trimmed. One was Persian lilac, trimmed with Venetian point, and the other of old gold satin, with a deep flounce of point de Raguse. The effect was said to be remarkably fine.

Many hints valuable to ladies who do their own dress making may be found in the following description of dresses designed by great artists:

An elegant walking suit is black silk and satin combined, with ornamented satin and illuminated beads. The front of the basque is ornamented in colored effects and ends in two heavy beaded tassels. The side drapery falls from the waist to the edge of the skirt of illuminated satin.

A beautiful costume, one of Worth's, has an old gold satin skirt, flounced to the waist in front all the way up, with Egyptian lace interwoven with old gold on the reverse. The princess train is of pearl-colored satin, embroidered charmingly in olive and old gold.

Another of Worth's is of white satin brocade, princess back. The entire front is a net work of pearl-colored beads and embroidery. Languedoc lace and shirrings of pleated satin trim the train.

A velvet and satin walking dress is trimmed with beaded illuminated ornaments and passe menteric. It has a long Van Dyke polonaise, the point ornamented fancifully with a heavy, spike-like pendant at the point. The bottom has two heavily shirred flounces.

A rich thing is a dark myrtle green costume of velvet and brocaded satin. The polonaise is brocaded velvet; the shirred and puffed skirt is finished with rows of pleatings fringed to match. The robe is one of Pangard's, and the general effect is exceedingly distingue.

A brown brocade dress with copper-colored polonaise, is trimmed with heavy cords and tassels and bows, faced with satin. The skirt is demitrain; the back is shirred in puffs and laid in pleats. The cuff is three rows of fine knife pleating.

A very handsome embossed velvet in Surrah silk is trimmed with jetted cords and ornaments. The basque drappery is of brocade, and the skirt of satin de Leon. The front of the skirt is arranged in new style, presenting a star effect in the central plaits and elegantly jetted ornament. A knife plaiting runs along the bottom. The side drapery is also of brocaded velvet, edged with handsome jetted fringe.

Sixteen Indian girls from the Indian Territory, ranging from sixteen to twenty-five years, have entered Moody's seminary at Northfield, Mass., where they will study for four years and then do missionary work among their own people.

Local Department.

—Select your spices for Thanksgiving cooking at Sechler & Co's.

—If you are troubled with rheumatism, use Kendall's Spavin Cure.

—The rapidly increasing popularity of Day's kidney pad is due solely to its intrinsic merit.

—Mr. Thomas Nolan, of Washington City, is visiting his friends and relatives in this place.

—The new store room of R. H. Duncan at Spring Mills is rapidly approaching completion. He expects to occupy it in a few days.

—When you feel like "setting 'em up" to your friends over the Republican victory buy your cigars at Harry Green's, and do it right.

—A spicy communication signed "Potter's Mills" came to hand too late to be of any use as a campaign card, hence its non-appearance.

—Harry Green's cigars sold fast on election night. But that wasn't strange. His cigars sell rapidly at all times, because they are "immense."

—Judging from the way a couple were hugging up to each other on a Linn street porch last night they must have imagined it mighty cold.

—Mr. George Crosthwaite, of Ithica, N. Y., is home on a visit, expecting to remain several days. George says they're all Garfield men down his way.

—A scissors-grinder was in town Monday and did a good business. Surely we don't need a change when scissors-grinders get rich traveling the streets.

—Messrs. John and Frank Campbell, Dave Parsons, Hud Crissman and William Laurie, all loyal Republicans and true, arrived home from Philipsburg on Saturday, and remained over election.

—Heavy rain all day Saturday and all night—clear sky on Sunday with high, cutting winds—sharp frost Sunday night, followed by more wind and snow squalls on Monday. Variety enough for anybody.

—Of the comets now sweeping through the heavens the one that is moving towards the north will reach its highest brilliancy in the first week in November, but disappear with all its fellows before the 4th of March next.

—If the work of repairing the Presbyterian church is finished that heap of rubbish before the edifice should be removed. It obstructs the passage of vehicles through the street and is an eyesore to those who live in the neighborhood.

—According to reports received from all over the county the recent rains have had but little effect in filling the streams and springs, which are remarkably low this year. Two or three more heavy rains will be necessary before cold weather sets in.

—A very prominent Democrat of this place, who is in a position to know, says if Garfield is elected President the parties negotiating for the car works will take possession and begin operations. Otherwise they will not purchase, and all negotiations will be at an end.

—Diphtheria and scarlet fever are raging in the towns around us in neighboring counties. In Hollidaysburg it is said that the public schools are closed on account of the scourge. Parents should be very careful here that these fatal diseases to children do not obtain a foothold among us.

—Rev. DeLong, pastor of the German Reformed church, isn't a bit stuck up. We have noticed him at the depot one or two mornings with his sleeves rolled up, assisting the workmen unload stone for his new church. The church is fortunate in having such an active, energetic man as pastor.

—John Ardell, Jr., left Monday for Lock Haven, having received intelligence that the heavy rains of Saturday had swollen the West Branch and its tributaries into a good rafting flood. Floods have been scarce this year and when one does occur lumbermen feel the necessity of "pushing things."

—Mrs. Dr. Elcoate left Lloydsville six weeks ago and has not been heard from since. Her height is about five feet six inches, fair complexion, black eyes and black hair, wearing grey dress, white sack, black hat and a linen duster. Any person knowing of her whereabouts will please address the same to Mrs. H. G. Gardner, Altoona, Pa.

THE ELECTION.

Result in the Borough and County Districts as far as Heard From.

There was quite a lively time around the polls Tuetday. The runners for both parties were busy all the morning and had what is denominated the doubtful vote all in before noon, so that they had the afternoon to bring in the sick and look after all delinquents from whatever cause.

There were several challenges at each window, but the work was carried on in a good humor. The Republicans were very careful not to challenge any votes where they were satisfied the parties had a right to vote, and by their systematic action seemed to have given the whole list careful overhauling before the voting commenced, canvassing carefully the rights of their own as well astheir opponents' votes about which there was any doubt.

The attorneys were promptly on hand to argue the case for any elector whose rights were in peril. Many on both sides were disappointed. One colored voter in the West ward, about whom the Democracy made a great hurrah and expected to secure a vote for Hancock, and who made a speech in their club room some weeks ago, could not carry it out but voted the solid Republican ticket.

The appearance at this writing seems to indicate that Chairman Rankin has his forces in the best of shape and that they are securing all the floating vote.

Harris, for legislature, is giving Gephart a close chase in all the districts that vote at Bellefonte. He seems to have broken all party bounds, Democrats as well as Republicans being his enthusiastic supporters. It is said by some of the knowing ones that he will even carry Benner township, but the truth of this surmise we will give in another column.

Spurious tickets, sent out by the Chairman of the Democratic State Committee, have been placed in all available places, mixed up with the genuine to deceive if possible the careless voter. This trick was early discovered by Chairman Rankin and all such tickets when found immediately destroyed. We have not heard of nor seen any bogus Democratic State ticket. We are glad to see that the Republican State Committee are above such meanness.

Following is the result in the borough and Spring township:

VICTORY!

Republican Jolification.

HURRAH, BOYS! HURRAH!

Notice is hereby given that the Republican clubs of Centre county are invited to join in a grand jolification over the great Republican victory, at Bellefonte Friday evening, November 5th, 1880. Delegations and clubs are requested to be on hand in the suburbs of Bellefonte at 7 o'clock p. m. sharp, and report to

D. S. Keller,
Chief Marshall.

—Who would have thought that intelligent men who claim to vote upon principle, when the Republicans are anxious to secure a Congress favorable to their principles, would give a Democratic Congressman 15 majority in a district where the Republicans have a majority of 100. Yet the North ward of Bellefonte did this very thing Tuesday, and many of the men who went back on the nominee of our party for Congress have within the last six months complained of this paper—saying it was not Republican—and even tried to fool an honest man into coming here to start a new paper and lose his money in serving them. We want to say just here that such action on their part is treason to party, and that such men are not reliable Republicans.

—On Monday night the Hallow-eve performance by the boys consisted in removing gates and steps, taking up gutter crossings, etc. This may be fun for the boys, but it should be severely punished by the authorities. Removing the crossings over deep gutters on as dark a night as night before last was is really dangerous to the pedestrian. Knowing the street he walks confidently ahead and the first knowledge he has that anything is wrong he is thrown headlong upon a hard stone pavement. We do not care how old the custom is, there is no sense in permitting the boys to "play fool" in this way. We hope this foolish practice will be abandoned in the future.

—Rev. J. B. Else, of Milesburg, preached two excellent sermons in the M. E church at Centre Hall last Sunday. The sermon in the morning was upon the subject of "The Endurance of Temptation." In the evening his subject was "The Inspiration of Scripture." The congregations were large and very attentive. The business session of the quarterly conference was deferred, in consequence of the rain, until next Saturday, Nov. 6, 1880, at 2:30 p. m.

—There was a little set to at the West ward window Tuesday afternoon. A loud-mouthed Democratic bummer called a young Republican a hard name which reflected on the character of his mother. The young man's father standing near squared off and down went the Democrat. This ended the matter. We should always remember that words spoken hastily at such a time are never meant—are most always said without malice.

—Mrs. Phebe Earle Gibbons is visiting Bellefonte. Mrs. Gibbons was at Paris during the exposition of 1878, and as she speaks the French language she endeavored to become acquainted with the people. Her articles called "French Farmers" and "The Citizen of Paris" appeared in Harpers' Magazine.

—Canned fruit, as fresh and healthy as when first put up, at Sechler's.

The Calithumpians.

The Republican "Calithumpians" made things lively last night after the glorious election news began to come in from all parts of the country. The boys were around with tin horns, cow-bells, drums, brooms, transparencies, etc., and the way they thumped and whooped 'er up over the great victories reported from everywhere under the sun was enough to make a Democrat howl with anguisn.

As the "procession" of Republican braves in their war paint approached the residence of a Democrat he immediately crawled into his trousers, summoned his family and departed for the cellar and there remained until the "horrid" sight had passed. O, lordy, but they got sick along towards morning when it became evident that Garfield would sweep the country from the Ocean to the Gulf, and so much Republican jollification was enough to turn them inside out, and we are not sure but that it did a few of them. There was a sadness and despair about the Democratic club room early in the evening, and it is said that Chairman Spangler was so indelicate as to absent himself from the funeral, which began at twelve o'clock and lasted until three a. m. O, carry us out!

A Disgusted Emigrant.

Two years ago last March J. G. Vantilburgh, of Boiling Springs, emigrated to the New Eldorado of Kansas. Last Saturday he returned, satisfied that "all is not gold that glitters." The golden fields of grain that he had in his mind's eye when he left his old home in the East to build up a new one in the West were destroyed by the drouth. He traveled about from place to place in the hope that somewhere in that famous State a place might be found "overflowing with milk and honey," but he found it not, although he traveled over sixteen hundred miles in a wagon drawn by two industrious mules, which made the journey, conveying himself, wife and five children in forty-six and one-half days. Mr. Vantilburgh is used to camp life, however, being an old soldier who served three years in the late rebellion in the Forty-fifth regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers. No doubt the wife and five children think their late experience has given them some knowledge of camp-life, also.

We hope that Mr. V. will now stay with us and vote the Republican ticket until old Centre is redeemed from the rule of the ring of defaulting tax-collectors, who are now wasting the people's money in riotous living.

Burnside Township Notes.

Pine Glenn, Oct. 28.

Mr. Editor: Please allow me a little space in your columns for a few items from Burnside township, which is seldom ever heard from in your paper. The majority of our people are busy at this season of the year.

Captain William White is getting his sawmill repaired, so as to be ready for work when the time comes. He don't believe in "putting off till to-morrow what can be done to-day."

Mr. J. H. Beates had better hurry and get his corn in the crib and have a lock and key for the door, or some one might want to borrow a bushel now and then.

The Earl is out hunting; we wish him success.

There are three schools in this township. The Laurel Run is taught by J. B. Newcomer. I don't know the names of the teachers who "sling the ideas" at Germansettle and Pine Glenn, but I do know they like spelling bees and kissing pretty well. The Laurel Run scholars have one fault with their teacher, and that is: He is married and they can't kiss him. They ought to steal his spectacles and kiss him unawares; perhaps they do.

There was a young married couple passed through here last week and stayed over night at the house of a friend who thought they wouldn't be serenaded, but they were.

We have a famous "dog killer" here. He fired two shots at a neighbor's dog, which was but a rod from him, and the dog is living yet; but that is nothing, for he is a Democrat. They are always aiming, but seldom hit.

"Bavardage."

—Yes, sir, Garfield is to be President of the United States for the next four years, and during that time Sechler & Co. will do their share towards making the country prosperous and happy by selling the purest and freshest groceries to be found in Centre county. Lay in a stock of goods from this famous store and you are bound to prosper and be happy. Nothing like it.

—Try Kendall's Spavin Cure, a sure remedy for spavins, curbs, ringbones, or any enlargement of the joints. See advertisement.

UP THE VALLEY.

Pungent Paragraphs from Our Stormstown Scribe.

I spoke in my last letter about Jerry Way's house being robbeb. Since then they found the money in the yard or orchard close by the house. Who put it there is a mystery that still remains to be solved.

Last week, when John Wilson's steam thresher was operating at Mr. Thompson's, below town, a horse shoe got into the machine and did some damage to the separator, but fortunutely no one was hurt.

Wild turkeys are very plenty on the mountain near this place. Deer have been seen around town in squads of from one to five, but I have heard of no hunters from town killing any yet. A party from Gatesburg killed two one day last week.

Master Alfred Bigelow, the famous rabbit hunter, takes down anything I ever heard of in the way of fancy shooting. The other day, when he was out after cotton tails he spied a fine large owl coming directly towards him. He drew a fine bead and pulled the trigger, and when the smoke had cleared away he saw directly in front of him his coach dog, dead, shot through the head.

Last week I said that the minister of this place said that Hancock was an old whiskey tub, which made him very cross. After working his Virginia blood up to fever heat he went for us and said everything he ever heard about us, and claimed the Democratic party never lied. However, he owned up to having said the above sentence, but he thinks I should not have told it. Now if he had got me around the neck and whispered in my ear that Hancock was an old whiskey tub, "but don't tell any person; if you do, I will make you bring home that bread," I might have kept it a secret. Perhaps the man forgot he said about the same thing at dinner one day at a neighbor's house in this township. So says the neighbor, and that neighbor don't lie. He said General Garfield drank more whisky than General Hancock. That accusation never was brought against General Garfield, not even by papers of the lowest repute. Virginia used to breed some noble statesmen and profound gentlemen, but she quit breeding a few hours before the above man was born. As I said before, he said some very unbecoming things about me for any man to say, much less a minister of the gospel. He told what I had done, &c., &c. And I will just mention here what I didn't do. I never watched deer-licks out of season; I never said Hancock was an old whisky tub or sot; I never sold an old ring-boned and spavined mare for $85 or $90; I never went into a class to take lessons from a fraud of a horse doctor, and got my money back, and never said anything about it until after the doctor had disappeared with my neighbors' money, and if I talked temperance as much as he does I would vote for Neal Dow.

Yours, Corporal.

—A preliminary meeting of graduates of the various Soldiers' orphan schools of Pennsylvania will be held at the Capitol building, Harrisburg, on Thursday and Friday, December 30th and 31st, 1880, for the purpose of arranging for a grand reunion of all the "sixteeners." It is desired by the committee having the matter in charge that there be a large attendance at this meeting.

—During the next four years of Republican rule Sechler & Co. will sell an enormous amount of their celebrated unadulturated family groceries, and don't you forget it. The people of this locality are going to buy their goods of this firm because they can economize by so doing. Genuine groceries are more lasting than inferior goods, and Sechler keeps none of the latter quality.

—Smoking and chewing tobacco, in great variety, at Sechler & Co's.

Ninety Miles an Hour.

The New York Sun says that there was turned out from the Grant Locomotive works in Patterson, N. J., a few days ago, a new locomotive of peculiar construction, intended for the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago railroad. Eugene Fontaine, the inventor, claims that this locomotive can be made to go ninety miles an hour, while the machinery is run no faster than that of an ordinary locomotive travelling at the rate of sixty miles an hour. The machinery is all on top of the boiler, instead of under it. The driving wheel rests on another wheel, which in turn rests on the track. This lower wheel has two rims, one a foot smaller than the other. The outer rim touches the track and the inner or smaller rim supports the driving wheel. The motion of the driving wheel thus communicated is magnified by this arrangement so that the lower wheel turns one-third faster than the driving wheel, and so the speed is increased. The smaller rim to the lower wheel bears to the larger rim a relation similar to that of a very large hub to any wheel. Of course any rate of motion communicated to such a hub is greatly magnified at the periphery of the wheel. In the same way the motion of the driving wheel in this case is magnified by the peculiar arrangement of the wheel it rests upon. Mr. Fontaine believes that his locomotive, if it were not for the increased resistance of the air, could be run at one hundred and seven miles an hour. He expects to make ninety miles an hour easily. The machinery of the new locomotive, which stood propped up on blocks, was put in motion with satisfactory results. Many railroad men have visited it.

Unhappy Ireland.

The British government, after an exhibition of patience which may have been wise, but which is at least open to question as to its actual prudence, have resolved to strike at the tall poppies in the field of Irish sedetion. Not a moment too soon has this policy been determined upon, for the latest threats of the blatant demagogues who, blind leaders of the blind, are leading their wretched followers into the ditch, have reached such a pitch that between their expressions and an actual declaration of revolutionary war there is but a technical distinction. Following their seditious utterances, property-owners have been shot down in broad daylight, and not content with this, well-disposed tenants have received notice that a similar fate awaits them if they dare to pay their full rents, and thus carry out honest contracts into which they have willingly entered. There is a reason to fear that the arrest of the leaders of the Land League will precipitate the crisis and bring about a hand-to-hand struggle. This is to be deplored, but as it must come sooner or later, it is as well that it should come now. The men who, as members of the British Commons, have been recreant to their oaths of office; who have preached strife instead of conciliation; who have taught the doctrines of the torch and the shotgun, and have harangued mobs instead of reasoning with their peers, cannot expect any sympathy from law-abiding citizens at home or abroae. That the wrongs of Ireland are deep and bitter may not be denied; but that the parnell policy can possibly lead to redress, no sane man will attempt to assert. Blood will be shed, homes desolated, and helpless womed and children will suffer for generations, as the cost of the rash ravings of men whose positions and advantages have been prostituted for factious enns. Property has its rights, and those rights must be respected.

Wit and Wisdom.

A California man has a farm of 65,000 acres. It is fortunate for him that he hasn't them in his jaw.

Considering that kind words cost nothing, what a poor stock of them is in the domestic markets.

A man who is continually sticking his nose into other people's business can be said to possess a "roamin' nose."

The port of Ayr, Scotland, sends out as many as four hundred mackerel boats in a day. Fishing Ayr pretty good around there.

A Chinaman can cut more wood than a white man, and do it with less labor, but when he comes to fishing or whittling he is a hundred years behind the age.

When a young man returns from a summer tour without his trunk, you may know he has had trouble with some of the rascally hotel keepers on the road.
